The Vanderbilt Family Legislation Temporarily Postponed.

Report of the Insurance Committee on the Miller Case.

Accusations and Statements of the Times All More Than Sustained.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Friday, April 19, 1872.

The New-York Charter is in the hands of the engrossing clerks, who have been hard at work since its passage to complete it for transmission to the Executive Chamber. It will probably reach there this evening or to-morrow morning. Two members of the Committee of Seventy—Messrs. JOHN WHEELER and ROSWELL D. HATCH—had a long interview with Gov. HOFFMAN today, to ascertain his views, and the probabilities of the charter meeting with any obstacles at his hands. The Governor was noncommittal, as he always is, with regard to what his action may be—preferring to read and carefully examine the engrossed copy before making up his mind. He freely expressed his conviction, however, of the necessity of some charter legislation for New-York, and felt disposed to promote the wishes of the Committee of Seventy and other reformers in the City so far as lay in his power. The question of the constitutionality of the charter was not touched upon.

THE VANDERBILT BILLS.

The legislation in the interest of the VANDERBILT family, which was expected to occupy the Assembly today to the exclusion of everything else, was postponed, by the kind permission of the Commodore and his lobbyists, in order to allow the House to go into Committee of the Whole on bills affecting the interests of the public. The bill to sink the Fourth-avenue track is now on the list of third readings, and will come up on its final passage probably next Tuesday morning. The Rapid Transit bill, which passed the Senate yesterday, came down to the Lower House today, and was referred to the Railroad Committee. As this Committee reported VANDERBILT's plan for sinking the Fourth-avenue track, at an expense of millions of dollars to the City, it is not likely to hesitate long over the rapid transit scheme. Mr. JOHN DUTCHER, who says he is here to look after the interests of the Harlem Railroad as one of its directors, denies emphatically that he disburses money among members for VANDERBILT or any one else, or that he uses any corrupt means to influence legislation. This may be true of Mr. DUTCHER, but if money is not used here, and in large sums, to put through VANDERBILT's bills, then there is a great deal of loose slander going on around the Legislature.

THE POLICE JUSTICES' BILL.

Mr. FLAMMER offered a resolution in the Assembly today to discharge the Judiciary Committee from the further consideration of the bill to reorganize the Police Justices' Courts of New-York City.

There appears to have been a good deal of wrangling over this bill in the Committee, and various propositions have been made to amend it in such a way that the Committee would agree to report it to the House. The bill as originally drawn removed all of the present Police Justices and provided for a new election by the people. Some members of the Committee desired to amend so as to give the appointment of the Justices to local officers in New-York in such a way that both parties would be represented. A majority of the Committee, however, has steadily refused to report the bill in any shape, which has given rise to unfavorable criticism of their motives and of the influences that are supposed to have been brought to bear upon the Committee. Mr. STRAHAN and Mr. VEDDER who, together with Mr. FLAMMER, are members of the Judiciary Committee, made a violent opposition to FLAMMER's resolution, which they said was insulting to the Committee. They were proceeding to oppose the quarrels which the Committeemen had had over the bill when Mr. HUSTED suggested that the House had witnessed quite enough of the washing of their dirty linen, and moved to lay the resolution on the table, which was carried.

THE RIFLE RANGE.

The bill introduced by Mr. JUDD to appropriate $25,000 toward establishing a "rifle range" for the First and Second Divisions of the National Guard came up in Committee of the Whole, and was discussed at great length. It was finally ordered to a third reading by a large majority.

THE JURY BILL.

The Senate Judiciary Committee this morning reported favorably the bill introduced in the forepart of the session by Mr. JUDD, and passed by the Assembly some time ago, for improving the character of petit jurors, by removing the absurd disqualification based on the formation of an opinion from reading the newspapers. Any man, under this bill, who can swear to render a verdict according to the evidence given on the trial, is qualified to be a juror, notwithstanding he may have formed impressions from newspaper reports for or against a prisoner.

THE SENATE.

The Senate has spent almost the entire morning session in the consideration of the new Election and Registry law for the City of New-York, which it has amended in some slight respects, and finally passed on a third reading. The benefits of the new five-minute rule were again made obvious on this occasion. The two or three talking men among the Democratic Senators were charged and primed with long speeches against almost every important section of the bill, and, without the rule in question, several days would have been consumed in discussing it before a vote could have been arrived at. As it was, they commenced their speeches, and just as they got fairly warmed up to the work the Chairman's hammer fell, and they had to subside. They soon got tired of their abortive efforts, and then the bill had plain sailing. Senator TIEMANN moved an amendment that the inspectors of election should be counselors at law of at least ten years' standing. This was supposed to be meant as sarcasm, and to be a reflection on the intricacy of the provisions of the bill; it was not carried. The bill passed by the following vote:

YEAS—Allen, Baker, Benedict, Bowen, Dickinson, Foster, Harrower, Lewis, Lowery, McGowan, Madden, Palmer, Perry, Robertson, Wagner, Weismann, Winslow, D. P. Wood, J. Wood, Woodin—19.

NAYS—Cook, Johnson, Lord, Tiemann—4.

Yeas all Republicans, nays all Democrats.

The following are the new provisions of the bill:

CENTRAL UNDER-GROUND.

The attempt to stifle the Central Under-ground bill, without debate, proved, after all, a failure. The motion to agree with the adverse report of the Railroad Committee came up again this morning, and was pressed by Mr. MADDEN, the Chairman of the Committee, in his usual violent and uncompromising style. The Senators seemed ashamed to follow him in this subservience to the Vanderbilt interest, and the report was tabled by a vote of 18 to 12. This leaves the matter open for consideration hereafter.

Report of the Insurance Committee on Miller—The Times' Accusations Sustained—Joint Resolution to Remove.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—Mr. LIPPITT, Chairman of the Insurance Committee, this evening presented a report of the Committee on the investigation into the conduct of Superintendent MILLER. The report is signed by all the Republican members of the Committee, seven in number, and consists of a synopsis of the evidence taken, together with a summary of the facts proved to the satisfaction of the Committee, all of which is submitted for the consideration of the House. While a majority of the Committee refused to accompany the report with a recommendation that MILLER be removed from office, the facts which they allege were proved to their satisfaction are of the most damaging character, and must necessarily result in his removal. They more than sustain all the charges brought against MILLER in the columns of the TIMES; it was therefore an inevitable sequel to the report that a resolution for the removal of MILLER should be offered, and Mr. TOBEY, who has conducted the investigation from the beginning, and is familiar with the whole evidence, was the proper person to offer it. The resolution, together with the report, was made the special order for Wednesday next, by which time Mr. AITKEN, one of the two Democratic members of the Committee, said he would be prepared to present a minority report. The resolution will be supported by at least five members of the Committee, and can scarcely fail to pass the Assembly. Only a majority is necessary, a quorum being present, to pass it, and a successor to MILLER can be appointed in like manner, by joint resolution.

The report of the Committee concludes as follows: "In conclusion, your Committee desire to say that to their minds it has been proved among other things to their entire satisfaction.

First—That the said Superintendent has received and appropriated to his own use the fee of one-fifth of one per cent, on the transfer of securities which he claims he is legally entitled to.

Second—That he has without authority of law, received, and in some instances, charged for his own use sums largely in excess of his legitimate expenses in making special examinations of companies, and that he has likewise received large sums in payment for his services in making such examinations.

Third—That he has allowed clerks in the Department, who are paid regular salaries by the State, to charge and receive illegal and excessive fees for making special and other examinations.

Fourth—That he has appointed Commissioners to make examinations who have received large and excessive fees, entailing great expense upon the companies.

Fifth—That the Department has been so managed that many of the companies have believed it necessary to employ brokers and attorneys who were known to be on intimate terms, and favorites with the Superintendent, to obtain examinations and protect the interests of their companies, and the payment of large sums for their personal influence in that behalf.

Sixth—That the testimony tends to show that he has received through G. SOUTHWICK, Jr., a commission of twenty per cent. on the printing of the Insurance Department.

Seventh—That he has withheld from the State Treasury the fees belonging to the Department, and which should have been paid into the State Treasury within a reasonable time.

Eighth—That $20,000 was raised by seven companies for improper legislative purposes, last Winter, to secure the passage of what was known as the Miller Life act, a bill conferring extraordinary powers upon the Superintendent, and that the Superintendent was cognizant of the use thereof.

Mr. TOBEY's resolution is as follows:

Resolved, If the Senate concurs, that GEORGE W. MILLER be, and he is hereby removed from the office of Superintendent of the Insurance Department, in pursuance of the provisions of Chapter 335 of the Laws of 1867.

Resolved, That the Attorney-General, if in his opinion the Superintendent is not entitled thereto, be and he is hereby requested to institute legal proceedings to compel the said Superintendent to pay into the State Treasury the fee of one-fifth of one per cent provided by law to be paid by insurance companies on the transfer of securities under the provisions of the Supply Bill of 1870.

Mr. GARDNER's bill to incorporate the New-York Warehouse and Railroad Company was considered in Committee of the Whole in both Houses, this evening, and progressed.

Several new bills were introduced in the Assembly, one of which, by Mr. MACKAY, provides for the appointment of new Commissioners of Excise, a Commission that was left unprovided for in the Seventy's Charter. S.

WASHINGTON.

Position of the Government on the Claims for Indirect Damages—The Views of the President on the Civil Service—Defeat of the Bill in the House—Tea and Coffee in Mr. Kelley's Tariff Bill.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Gen. BANKS, in response to the request of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called on Secretary FISH today to learn the desire of the Government with reference to the matter of the claims for indirect damages. He was informed that the American demand would not be modified, and that the President desired that the existing status of the American case should be maintained. It is not probable therefore that the Committee will feel at liberty to take any further action. The American counter-case will be presented to Congress on Monday. It is now very generally understood here that the Government insists upon maintaining its original position for the sole purpose of securing the arbitration of the principle involved. The magnitude of the question, and the great gain to be obtained by its decision has seemingly been overlooked in the discussion of the case. A decision disallowing the claims would really be of more advantage to this Government for future emergencies than any award of damages. For the purpose of having this principle arbitrated and settled for all time to come, so that it might be a precedent in future complications, there is no doubt but that this Government would consent to waive any payment of money damages that might be awarded in case of a possible decision adverse to England.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE CIVIL SERVICE.

In view of the imputations that have been freely cast upon the President during the civil service debate, to the effect that he has been caught by a trick of his enemies, and that he is not sincere in his advocacy of the new rules, Gen. GARFIELD and Mr. PERRY, of Ohio, called upon him last evening to satisfy themselves as to his real views. In the course of his speech today, referred to elsewhere, Gen. GARFIELD sought to give the impression made upon him and his colleague by the interview with Gen. GRANT. BUTLER immediately objected, raising the point of order that the words of the Executive could not be introduced upon the floor to influence legislation. BUTLER's object was clearly to prevent a statement which would conclusively show that he, and not the friends of civil service reform, were antagonizing and misrepresenting the President. It is fortunate that Gen. BUTLER's very natural sensitiveness need not prevent the country from understanding explicitly, once and for all, exactly what the conviction, the desire and the purpose of Gen. GRANT are with reference to the civil service. Gen. GARFIELD succeeded in saying upon the floor that after a long conversation with the President a firm and clear impression was produced upon both himself and Mr. PERRY that the President was sincere and in earnest in the steps he had taken, and in the assistance he had asked for at the hands of Congress. The President said to Gen. GARFIELD that if Congress will not help him to reform the service, he will continue to do the best he can without the help of Congress. He expressed himself as believing that if the Republican Party can succeed in divorcing the members of Congress from the work of nominations to office, except where their advice is asked, it would give us a better class of officers. It would be better for Congress and far better for the Executive. In reply to the insinuation that the whole agitation of civil service reform is a trick into which the enemies of the President have entrapped him, Gen. GRANT has an unanswerable reply. In his message of Dec. 5, 1870, he used these words, speaking of the civil service in vogue: "I call the attention of Congress to an abuse of long standing which I desire to have reformed." This was at least four months before that amendment was tacked to an appropriation bill, as BUTLER insists, by the President's enemies. The amendment did not make it compulsory upon the President to go on with the preparation of a different plan, but he did so of his own desire, to see an end to evils which it is impossible for him to check in any other way. The President asks of Congress that it will help him to make a start. He does not think a reform can be effected all at once, or that the best method can be hit upon without some trial and considerable modification. As for the plan of competive examinations, it is the best the Board has thus far been able to devise, and President GRANT is exceedingly anxious to give the rules a full and fair trial. His own views as to what these rules ought to be, have undergone some modification. Since the Commission first prepared them, the rules have been changed in accordance with new suggestions which have seemed wise, but the President thinks they may still be bettered, if Congress will allow their faults to be remedied by actual trial. If Congress will suggest something better, he will be glad to give that an equal fair trial. But he is not willing that the system of making appointments should be left as it now is. Gen. GRANT does not think it ought to be understood that any man has a perpetual right to any office, even if he does his work well; but such an officer ought to hold his position during the term for which he is appointed—not to be turned out because some other man wants his place. In order to prevent such turning out, it seems to be necessary for Congress to legislate against its own assumed and unwarranted control of patronage. For this reason the President expresses himself in favor of a bill like Mr. WILLARD's, except that he would not have it made a penal offense for Congressmen to make recommendations. He would simply have passed a law that would forbid un

THE SEVENTY'S CHARTER.

Effect of Its Passage on the Office-Holders.

Their Hopes and Fears—Opinion of a Police Commissioner—Joy of Reformers and Chagrin of Tammany Republicans.

The charter appears to have completely upset the politicians, both in and out of office, and not one seemed yesterday to be decided as to its effect or permanency. The Democrats say the Governor will not sign it, and in that hope strive to live; the Reformers assert that he will not dare to refuse his signature, and that an election will take place in May; and the Tammany Republicans believe he will pocket the bill and allow it to become law by default. Groups of excited politicians met in every branch of the Court-house, City Hall and Park, and discussed the question, as if it were a matter of life and death. The Mayor yesterday was very reticent on the subject. He said that he never studied a proposed law until it was a fact, and the charter was not yet a fact. The Governor was a lawyer, and would see the defects of the bill as soon as any one. So far as it affected himself, the Mayor said, he would be glad of any pretext for leaving the office, and had felt so for the past nine months. He believed the election, if it took place in May, would give the whole power back to the Democrats, who, he thought, were able to elect the Mayor and Common Council.

In the Mayor's offices every person believed that the Governor would, as a Democrat, veto the bill, on the ground that cumulative voting was not at all American or Democratic. Alderman CONAN was of the same opinion, and said he should at once apply to Tammany Hall for a recognition. If they did not want him, then he would look elsewhere; but if he left Tammany Hall it should be their fault, and not his. The clerks thought their political death had been drawing near for some time, and had come at last.

Controller GREEN said that the work of his office went on as usual, he hoped that good men would be found in every prominent office, and thus carry on the business of reform. The subordinate officials feel that their positions are safe, yet decline to approve or disapprove of the charter, not knowing what turn matters may take during the next few days.

Assistant Aldermen CONON and HART, the Reformers in the new Board, heartily welcome the appearance of the new charter, and are perfectly willing to go out of office so that a new and Reform Board shall be elected. On Thursday afternoon, when the news of the City charter's passage was received at the City Hall, Assistant Aldermen Wade, Codington, Swartz, Simonson, Pinckney, Krauss and Conor were in the room of the Board, awaiting a meeting. The ten Tammany men and two Reformers were in a room down-stairs, "caucussing" on the subject of GUIDET'S pavement, but when the news was received, they rapidly dispersed, and went to their homes sadly disgusted.

Mr. VAN NORT, of the Department of Public Works, admitted visitors yesterday, but declined to talk upon the subject of the charter. "If it became law, he would be legislated out, and in that event his opinion was worth nothing; if it did not become law, it was useless to talk about a dead issue." Nothing would induce him to speak more upon the subject. The present condition of the Department of Public Works was a matter which would bear inspection he believed, but as he was of opinion that the Governor would not sign the charter, and that the Legislature could not pass it over his veto, he thought his attention should be given to the Department rather than to politics.

The subordinate bureaus of the Department of Public Works every official seemed confident that the charter would be signed, as they could see no reason why the Governor should refuse his assent.

No one in authority could be found at the Department of Docks, and the office-holders when asked about the charter said it "was not yet signed, and perhaps never would be." Their hope was apparently father to the thought.

The entire Police Department and the members of the force are canvassing the possibility of retiring into private life. It is generally conceded that the present Commissioners of Police will have to give way if the charter becomes a law, but as the great body of the force is transferred to the new powers, it is not probable that any great change will be made in the rank and file, or the subordinate officers.

A TIMES reporter called at Police Headquarters to "interview" the officials there in relation to the passage. "HANK" SMITH is still sick, and has not been in the building for two weeks. None but his intimate friends are allowed to see him, and no interview could be had with the "poor boy of the Mohawk."

The reporter saw Commissioner MANIERRE in relation to his opinion of the new charter. The Commissioner condemned the charter in unmeasured terms. He said that it was a matter of great personal indifference to him whether he remained in office or not. The greatest defect in the charter, in his opinion, was the grouping together of the Police, Fire, and Health Departments, and the Department of Buildings, under one Board. No six men could be selected as the Commissioners of Public Safety who could control the different Departments successfully. They would be compelled to depend too much on the executive officers of the various bureaus and their subordinates. It took nearly all the time of the four Police Commissioners at present in power to run the Police and Health Department with success, although these departments are in their operations more closely connected than the Police and Fire Departments. The people have no idea of the importance and magnitude of the work performed by the Building Department, and the immense power that could be wielded by the executive officer of that bureau for political purposes. Then, again, the Commissioners of Public Safety could not buy a sheet of paper, order repairs to a station, or to an engine-house, or do a hundred different things required at a moment's notice, without a special appropriation made by the Board of Aldermen. The character and standing of the Commissioners of Public Safety, in Mr. MANIERRE'S opinion will, of course, depend upon the character of the men elected to compose the Board of Aldermen. They cannot be higher, and probably will not be lower, than the fountain-head from which the appointments will emanate. It is probable that the new Commissioners will be six gentlemen of character and position, but with no experience in Municipal matters and in the disciplining of large bodies of men. The Mayor, who is to be the presiding officer of the Board, will doubtless be a cipher in the Board. At present the Mayor is an ex officio member of the Board of Police, but cannot vote on appointments, but can exercise that privilege in all other matters. Under the new régime the Mayor is to be a full member of the Board, but will probably be outvoted by his associates. There is no concentration of responsibility. The Mayor appoints the Controller and City Chamberlain for one year, and the Mayor, Controller and Chief-Justice of the Common Pleas appoint the Corporation Counsel. The Commissioners of Public Safety are responsible to forty-five Aldermen, who in turn can shirk the responsibility by saying that they did for the Commissioner whose conduct in office was reprehensible. If the charter becomes a law, said Mr. MANIERRE, no less than 10,000 voters will be disfranchised. The election is set down for the 21st of May, and the Constitution provides that no citizen can vote for an Alderman unless he has been a resident of the Senatorial district for thirty days previous to the election. There are also many inconsistencies in the document, which will not bear criticism, and appears to have been drawn up by men whose only object was to concentrate all the power in their hands to manipulate the political dongs of 3,000 men in the various departments. The present Commissioners were ready to vacate as soon as they received official notification of the appointment of their successors. For himself, he would say that the personnel of the Police Department was as good as it ever had been, and better than it was six years ago, when he (Mr. MANIERRE) became a member of the Board. The Department had been run economically and for the best interests of the public.

Superintendent KELSO had nothing to say, either for or against the new charter. He was a policeman and not a politician, and was not in a position to criticise the acts of the Legislature.

Wall-Street Yesterday—Freaks in Harlem Railroad Stock.

The fluctuations in Harlem Railroad stock, which were as unexpected (to the outside observers at least) as they were sudden, caused much excitement on the stock market yesterday. The reason of the rapid change is differently assigned; but it seemed to be generally conceded that the rise was owing to the action of the Legislature in regard to VANDERBILT'S Fourth-avenue Railroad bill. As the New-York Central and Hudson River Road would be equally affected by the reforms demanded by the people, it was thought strange that the price of its stock should not have been equally affected with the Harlem stock by the Legislature's action.

The sudden fall in the price in the afternoon was not attributed by those with whom the reporter spoke, to anything but the natural reaction which seems to follow any very rapid and unexpected advance in the prices of gold or stocks in Wall-street. It did not fall to its price early in the day, however, but closed at an advance of about seven per cent.

The difference between the highest and lowest prices yesterday shows that Harlem stock went up ten and three-quarters per cent., or from 118¼ to 129, the fluctuations, numbers and amount of sales, and excitement, not having been equaled in that particular stock for a long time. At the Second Board, Harlem rose three per cent. (126 to 129) at one jump.

At the First Board, Harlem stock opened at 118¼, but the second sale was at 119, whence it soon reached 120, about 2,000 shares having changed hands. At the 1 o'clock call, at the first sale, it had advanced one-half per cent., and, amid much excitement, went rapidly and steadily up by rises of one-half and one per cent., until it touched 126; then the price suddenly jumped three per cent. to 128, immediately after which 300 shares were sold at 129. From 129 its fall was as sudden as its rise had been, and the next quotation was at 125. From this it recovered a little, afterward reaching 126.

With the exception of Harlem, the stock market was generally dull but strong, Pacific Mail advancing a little and Erie declining.

KINGS COUNTY CHARTER.

Damaging Excess of Expenditures by the Subcommittee of Fifty.

The Subcommittee appointed by the Brooklyn Committee of Fifty, to investigate the affairs of the Department of Charities, have rendered a report of their labors, which have been confined to the details of the affairs of the Commissioners for the six months succeeding July 31, 1871; the examination of the books, accounts and vouchers; the condition of the institutions, and analyzing the report of the Commissioners for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1871. The printed report of the Commissioners states that the number of persons temporarily relieved was 35,736. The Committee cannot verify this statement, as they were informed that one of the books containing the names of those relieved in the Twelfth Ward was lost, but upon visiting families reported to have been relieved, it was found that the number of members of the families had been overstated in different instances. The amount of the discrepancy, however, could not be accurately determined. The persons relieved number 14,249 in the First District, 13,133 in the Second, 6,220 in the Third, 580 in the Fourth, and 476 in the Fifth District; the personal average of relief one in 11 4-5 of the population, and an average per capita tax for out-door relief of 34 cents on the entire population of the City. The Committee report favorably upon the general appearance of the institutions, but think, from an investigation of the books, accounts and vouchers of the Department, that contracts have been given out recklessly and by favoritism; that prices have been allowed on purchases in "open market" far beyond the market value; 40 cents per quart (the ordinary retail price) was paid for 41,481 quarts of milk, which could have been purchased 25 per cent. cheaper. The exorbitant price of 45 cents was paid for butter. An excessive quantity of coal, 3,400 tons, was used. Potatoes cost $3 62 per barrel, while the market price did not average more than $2 25; seven barrels a day were charged—an excessive quantity. While oats sold in the market under 70 cents, the price paid by the Commissioners was 93 cents per bushel. Sole-leather cost about 35 per cent. too much. There was an overcharge of 4 cents per pound on 22,200 pounds of pork. There is a charge of $2,741 03 for tobacco, snuff and pipes. Nine hundred and fifty-six gallons of whisky, wine and alcohol are entered, but no price named for them in their report; however, there is an entry of whisky, wine, alcohol and groceries, $7,849. The purchases were made from THOMAS MULLEN, a liquor-dealer; in his bill for the subsequent six months, whisky is charged at $4, wine at $4 50, and alcohol at $2 60. He has no bill for groceries, but the charge per gallon of the first item would make the average price per gallon for liquors $8 21. There certainly seems to be a mystery about the "groceries." The foregoing examples, the Committee believe, show that the average overcharge for the entire fiscal year for supplies has been fully thirty per cent.

The same characteristics are apparent in the transactions for the six months subsequent to July 31, 1871. Medicines have been purchased of retail druggists, involving an overcharge of thirty per cent. Hams, groceries, sole-leather, plumbers' material, stoves and range fixtures, were all purchased at a like advance upon the market prices. The Committee also were informed that in inviting bids for contracts, samples were given out for supplies to be furnished; but while the contracts were made in accordance, the articles consumed were of a very inferior quality. As an example, the Committee cite the case of a contract with Mr. J. KEARNEY for shoes. The contract calls for 6,160 pairs, to cost $6,421. The deliveries, however, were only 4,107 pairs, for which the sum of $7,842 45 was paid.

The manner in which this seems to have been arranged (and by which it is fair to infer the contractor was enabled to underbid and secure the contract) was by putting therein grades of shoes which would not be called for, as follows: 400 pairs "men's army shoes" at two cents; 850 pairs "child's cacks" at one cent, and 500 pairs "buskins" at five cents; of which articles none were delivered, but of the more profitable character of the shoes the entire sum in excess of the numbers specified in the contract, clearly evidencing that the contract system, as now managed, is liable to abuse.

The Committee give the following as the proportionate cost of charities:

Total amount of bills paid			$512,178 24
Apportioned as follows:
Salaries and services—
Institutions and Department	$88,189 02
Temporary relief districts	30,507 24
Total	$118,696 26
Other expenses—
Institutions, &c	59,121 85
Temporary relief districts	996 09	60,117 94	178,814 20
Expended in supplies			$333,364 04
Deducting twenty per cent. as a minimum overcharged			66,672 81
Shows as real values of supplies purchased			$266,691 23
And adding to total expense as above		$178,814 20
The twenty per cent. overcharged		66,672 81
Shows			$245,487 01

as the cost of disbursing $266,691 23; while no estimate is made of interest on the amount invested in buildings and other property.

PROPORTIONATE COST IN THE INSTITUTIONS.

Total supplies distributed as above	$333,364 01
Less temporary relief supplies	109,704 88
Amount of supplies distributed to institutions	$223,659 16
Less 20 per cent. overcharge, as before	44,731 88
Net value of supplies to institutions	$178,927 33
Cost of disbursement—
Salaries and services	$88,189 02
All other expenses, except those of temporary relief districts	57,494 85
Total	$145,683 87
And adding the 20 per cent. overcharge	44,731 88

as the cost of distributing $178,927 33 at the institutions, in which cost is included all department expenses, except salaries and services in the temporary relief districts.

The system of out-door relief is at fault in giving orders on groceries, by which the recipient does not receive more than seventy-five per cent. The number of the employes of the Department also seems too large. The Committee think that, instead of being a source of relief to paupers, the institutions might be more properly characterized as asylums for the saving support of the friends and retainers of politicians.

THE WATSON MURDER.

The Testimony Closed—Summing up for the Defense by Judge Morris.

Yesterday was the fifth day in the trial of Mrs. HYDE for the murder of Mr. WATSON. At 11 o'clock Mr. MORRIS, counsel for the defense, began his address to the jury, and with the exception of a short recess, he was occupied with it throughout the day, and the Court adjourned at 5 o'clock. Judge MORRIS referred with severity to the action of the District-Attorney in challenging jurors, stating that it was the first time that the people assumed that position instead of the defense. The object of the trial was to administer justice not to demand blood. The law regarding murder and homicide was generally explained, and great stress was laid upon the prisoner's youth, and the condition of her mind arising from physical disorders. If, as medical science demonstrates, a person can be rendered unaccountable for his acts in an instant of time, why for that act of Providence should a person be held responsible while his reason is destroyed? When this assault was committed upon Mrs. HYDE, her entire physical system being diseased, it acted as a spark to fire the train, and in an instant she became insane and irresponsible for what she did. Evidence had been adduced to show that this impulsive insanity was a hereditary taint, and all that was required to develop it was excitement. Something more than visionary theories or angry declamation on the part of the prosecution would be required to disprove all the teachings of medical science during the past fifty years. The instantaneous clearance of reason and of the dictates of judgement is a frequent result of continued mental strain, and persons undoubtedly insane frequently recollect acts they have committed, though they were not responsible for them when committing them. The operation of the mind is a mystery. All the chords may be sound except one, and when that one is touched the whole frame responds. When reason is dethroned for a moment ungovernable frenzy does its work. Judge MORRIS cited numerous legal and medical authorities in corroboration of his theory, and concluded his speech at 5 o'clock, when the Court adjourned to 9 this morning.

The Vacated Assessments.

In Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, before Judge BRADY, there were twenty-six motions on the calendar for writs of mandamus to compel Controller GREEN to formally vacate assessments which had been declared by the Court to have been improperly imposed. Return was made that the Controller had already complied with the order of the Court, and the motions were accordingly dismissed.

JUDGE CARDOZO.

Argument by the Counsel of the Bar Association in the Matter.

The following is a careful abstract of the argument submitted by the Committee of the Bar Association, Messrs. J. M. VAN COTT, S. E. PARSONS and A. STICKNEY, in the matter of the charges preferred against Judge CARDOZO by that Association:

All public offices are a trust for the people. The end of all government is the public welfare. The corrective for judicial maladministration applied by our Constitution, is impeachment and removal from office. Although, under our elective system a Judge holds for a term of years, his tenure is still on the condition of good behavior. If he misbehaves he may be removed. Violation of the law, in a clear case, is misbehavior in a Judge. Partiality is misbehavior. Consciously acting under influences other than his apprehensions of the law, and the merits of the cause, is misbehavior in a Judge. The reception by a Judge of pecuniary or other presents from litigants, whose causes are pending, or about to be brought, or just determined, is misbehavior. The Judges, whose official conduct is now the subject of legislative inquiry, are charged with habitually and with wilful violation of the laws, in the interest of personal and political favorites, and to promote their own private advantage by the exercise of judicial patronage.

It is shown that while suits have been pending and undecided before them, they have been in such peculiar relations with some of the litigants as to justify the belief that their decisions would not be impartial. It is shown that they have pending those litigations, received valuable "presents" from the litigants in whose favor they have made extraordinary decisions. It is shown that they have received, sometimes in the name of loans, sometimes in the name of presents, sometimes in forms to which they have not ventured to give names, large sums of money from those favored litigants. The gross abuse of the power or discretion of the Court in appointing receivers where no proper case was made for such an appointment according to the usual course and practice of the Court, and the allowance of exorbitant fees to receivers and their counsel, have been charged and proved against Judge CARDOZO.

The first charge against Judge CARDOZO relates to the conspiracy of JAMES FISK, JAY GOULD and others, in the Fall of 1869, to raise the price of gold and charge with enormous differences parties unable to make deliveries on their outstanding contracts. We claim to have substantiated by proof the whole detail of that charge, viz., that the price of gold having suddenly fallen on the 24th of September (the memorable "Black Friday") from 163 to 133, whereby GOULD, FISK, and their allies would have suffered enormous losses in the ordinary course of settlements, a scheme was concocted by them and carried out through the ex parte orders made by Judge CARDOZO in the suits of their brokers, to save the conspirators from the loss of several millions to which they were liable on their contracts. The gold transactions of that day at the Gold Exchange Board, amounting to several hundred million dollars, were made subject to the rules for clearances at the Gold Exchange Bank, and (in case of disputes) to arbitrations by the Committee of the Gold Exchange under the by-laws. Judge CARDOZO'S order, ex parte, broke from loving at business and putting the bank in the hands of a receiver, prevented the clearances; and his order enjoining the Arbitration Committee from adjusting differences under the by-laws of the Gold Exchange, prevented the enforcement of settlements; and thus the conspirators were saved.

The English Erie stock receivership, investigated in the inquiry against Judge BARNARD, was preceded by a collusive suit brought by one NYCE against the Erie Company, HEATH and others, in which Judge BARNARD made an ex parte injunction order, requiring the Company to close the books and stop the transfers. It was shown that this suit was instigated by the Erie Company, a large portion of the complaint being in the handwriting of one MORGAN, a clerk in the law department of that corporation. The complaint was prepared and taken to the office of a not conspicuous lawyer who appeared, as plaintiff's attorney, the suit was launched. The pretext of the suit was, that the Erie Classification act was unconstitutional; that the holders of foreign stock would conspire to continue the classified directors in office, by successive elections, under that unconstitutional act; and that an injunction, closing the stock-books against transfers, was necessary to protect NYCE and other stockholders whose rights had been impaired by that unconstitutional legislation. A motion was made before Judge CARDOZO, on behalf of the English holders, on affidavits, to dissolve the injunction. The papers in that case were of the argument and he kept them. One point, at least, was secured; the defendants could not move on affidavits before any other Judge to dissolve the injunction. Judge CARDOZO never decided the motion.

In the case of BOWNE against LEVERIDGE, in which the plaintiff sought to open the accounts of trustees and to compel them to be readjusted, and to set aside an agreement under which a large real estate had been divided, the complaint did not ask for a receiver. No question was made as to the pecuniary responsibility of the Trustees, who were men of large wealth, or of the other party to the division of the real estate, whose fortune amounted to several millions. Judge CARDOZO, on the 31st December, 1869, without the slightest suggestion that the estate was in danger, or that any possible transfer of it pendente lite could place it beyond the judgment that might be rendered (a fat pendens being on file) made an ex-parte order appointing JAMES M. SWEENEY receiver. A few days after, the question of continuing the receivership was elaborately argued before Judge CARDOZO; he took the papers, and after a lapse of ten months, decided that no case existed for a receivership and discharged the receiver. But the receiver was allowed $5,000, and his counsel, A. J. SMITH, $3,500. Why was the receiver appointed?

Hon. ALBERT CARDOZO took his seat on the bench of the Supreme Court in January, 1868. Mr. GRATZ NATHAN, a nephew of Judge CARDOZO'S wife, was then an attorney of three years' standing.

Mr. GRATZ NATHAN was deemed by Judge CARDOZO to be the most able and suitable person at the Bar of the City of New-York to mete out justice to litigants, and one FRANCIS BIXBY, a personal friend of Judge CARDOZO, was deemed the most competent man within the jurisdiction of the New-York Supreme Court to be receiver, and his services deemed to possess an unheard-of value, if not to litigants, at least to himself. The justice and law distributed by Mr. NATHAN also demanded higher compensation than had ever before been made to men who had grown gray at the Bar.

The fees from these references, and the fees by him received as counsel for Mr. BIXBY, added greatly to the amounts deposited in and drawn from Mr. NATHAN'S bank account, and of the moneys so drawn from his bank account, about $30,000 went into Judge CARDOZO'S bank account. Mr. NATHAN could give no statement, nor had he any means whatever of getting information, as to what he had done with this paltry sum of $30,000.

Mr. BIXBY, the receiver, gave testimony as to the amounts of his fees as receiver in a few cases where the fees had been fixed by Judge CARDOZO.

As receiver of the British Commercial Mutual Life Insurance Company—Mr. BIXBY was appointed receiver on the ground that the Company was insolvent, and the policy-holders insecure—he reinsured all the policies under Judge CARDOZO'S order; received under Judge CARDOZO'S order a fee of $12,000, and then had a fund of some amount remaining in his hands, which he paid over to the representatives of the Company from England. As receiver of the Beekman Fire Insurance Company, appointed by the order of Judge CARDOZO, he has received already fees of between $5,000 and $,6000, and the receivership is not yet closed. As receiver of the Astor Fire Insurance Company, appointed by the order of Judge CARDOZO, he received a fee of nearly $12,000 for his services, extending nominally over a little more than a month; and during this period, he testified that he did not recollect how often he attended at the Company's office, and could not tell whether he went there "as often as once a week." As receiver of the Hoffman House, his salary was $10,000. As Receiver in another suit, of HUNGERFORD against PATTON, appointed by the order of Judge CERDOZO, he received by Judge CARDOZO'S order, a fee of $2,000, the nominal service covering only a few days, and the receiver never having had in his possession a dollar of either money or property.

Mr. NATHAN testified that in almost every case of a foreclosure or partition sale made by him, his fees were two and a half per cent. on the proceeds of sale. And in the cases mentioned, where Mr. BIXBY was receiver, Mr. NATHAN received for his fees as receiver's counsel in the British Commercial case $5,000; in the Astor case, $1,000; in the Beekman, $1,000; in the Great Western Life Insurance Company, (not yet closed,) $2,000; in the Hoffman House case, $3,000; in HUNGERFORD against PATTON, $500. And during all this time there was the gentle flow of "bank bills" from Mr. NATHAN to Judge CARDOZO. Mr. NATHAN was asked to allow an examination of his check-books with reference to any payments made by him to Judge CARDOZO. This he declined to do. Mr. NATHAN was then examined as to a series of checks drawn by him, amounting in all to about $30,000. Several of his check-books had disappeared altogether. Mr. NATHAN kept no cash-book, and as to these checks, he could give no information, either as to whom he paid them, for what he paid them, or whence the moneys against which they were drawn came to him. Mr. NATHAN knew to whom he paid this money. He would have told had he dared to tell. Judge CARDOZO knew from whom he received this money. He would have proved, if he could have proved, that it came from any one but Mr. NATHAN. We charge then, and clearly prove, that the process of the Supreme Court of the State of New-York has been sold, and payment therefor received in "bank bills."

The case of the two women, MARY PEARSALL and JOANNA O'CONNOR, is next cited, the particulars of which have already been fully published, and Judge CARDOZO is charged with a violation of the most fundamental principles of constitutional law by his action in the matter.

In FIELDS vs. FIELDS, a divorce suit, the final hearing was before Judge INGRAHAM. Judge BARNARD, who had not heard the parties, got possession of the papers, and decided the cause, granting the wife a divorce, but refusing her alimony. The act of Judge BARNARD—deciding a cause he had not heard—is a statute misdemeanor. A motion was made before Judge CARDOZO to set it aside. He decided that the judgment was irregular, but he refused to set it aside, because he said he thought it was such a judgment as might have been proper for Judge BARNARD to render if he had had jurisdiction to decide the cause at all. The defendant was of a different opinion, for it was proved that he paid $10,000 to stop the prosecution of an appeal. Mr. GRATZ NATHAN was Mr. FIELDS' assistant Corporation Attorney. Mr. FIELDS testified that Judge BARNARD had lent him $5,000, and Judge CARDOZO was their common friend.

The use of the writ of habeas corpus has been grossly abused, to discharge from prison persons undergoing their sentences after final conviction in the Court of Special Sessions. The Court of Appeals has just decided that the act of 1870, reorganizing the Court of Special Sessions, was unconstitutional. Does that excuse Judge CARDOZO? He had not discharged on that ground: First, he has solemnly held that the act was constitutional; second, he had refused to discharge parties convicted by the Court of Special Sessions, organized under that act, when they were represented by other counsel than "habeas Howe" & Hummels. The reason why this firm were uniformly successful when other lawyers were uniformly unsuccessful, on the same state of facts, does not appear otherwise than by inference.

We have, concludes the argument, in this hurried review of portions of the evidence, sought to recall to the notice of the Committee some of the facts elicited in support of the charges. If they do not prove that and corrupt conduct, judicial misbehavior, words have lost their meaning and facts their significance.

OBITUARY.

Hon. Edwin F. Johnson.

In the death of Hon. EDWIN F. JOHNSON, civil engineer, that profession has lost one of its ablest and most scientific representatives. Mr. JOHNSON died in this City on the 19th inst., in the sixty-ninth year of his age. He was the eldest son of Hon. JOHN JOHNSON, a leading civil engineer, and for many years Surveyor-General of Vermont, and was born in that State, May 23, 1803. At an early period of his life his taste for his profession was manifested by his taking charge, at the age of eighteen, of a surveying party engaged in establishing the northern boundary between the United States and the British Provinces. His education was completed at the Norwich Military University, where he afterward became an instructor, and subsequently he assumed charge of the Military College at Middletown, Conn., (now Wesleyan University.) At this institution he established a special department of civil engineering, the first of that character in this country. He resumed the active duties of his profession about 1829, in which year he published a review of a project for a railway to the West, wherein he advocated the extension of a line to the Mississippi, and indicated Rock Island as the proper terminus on that river, a route actually adopted in detail many years later. In this review, written at a time when very high engineering authority considered that the railway was destined only to occupy "middle ground between a good turnpike and a canal," he was the first in his profession to publish, in reference to railways, the declaration that "when their merits became better known and more fully appreciated, by far the greater portion of the inland trade will be conducted upon them,"—a conclusion the accuracy of which has since been fully demonstrated. In 1835 he made a survey of a route for the connection of the waters of the Hudson with Lake Ontario, a project which led to the enlargement of the Erie Canal, a work on which he was also engaged. In 1836 he occupied the position of Chief Engineer of the Auburn and Syracuse Railroad, since incorporated with the New-York Central, and about the same period he was the Chief Engineer of the Utica and Schenectady Railroad. In 1838 he was appointed by Gov. MARCY Chief Engineer of the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain Railroad, and also held the position of Chief Engineer of the New-York and Albany, now the Harlem Railroad. In 1845 he became Chief Engineer of the Oswego and and Syracuse Railroad, and in 1847 he projected, as Engineer in Chief, the New-York and Boston Railroad, known as the Air Line Road. From 1850 to 1854 he was Chief Engineer of the road now known as the Chicago and North-western Railroad.

The subject of water communication between New-York and the West, by way of the great lakes, the St. Lawrence, Lake Champlain, and the Hudson, was one of especial interest to him, and he was probably the first to give definite form to the project of a ship-canal and marine railway around Niagara Falls.

The idea of a railway to the Pacific early occupied his attention, and to his persistent efforts and investigations, continued through a long series of years, more than to those of any other person, is doubtless due the ultimately successful establishment of transcontinental communication in this country. As early as 1840 he commenced the publication of articles upon this subject, evincing close study and careful personal examination of the different routes. And in 1853 he published an able treatise, covering the entire subject and advocating the northern route. This treatise has been characterized by high authority as one of the most remarkable engineering productions of the age. His efforts in behalf of the Northern Pacific Road were finally attended with practical success, and when that corporation was organized he became its Chief Engineer, and retained this position until a short time before his death, when his ill health and advancing years compelled him to resign his charge. The Company, however, refused to part with his services, and appointed him their consulting engineer, which position he held when he died. In addition to the enterprises mentioned, he was connected at different periods of his life in his professional capacity with many other railways, canals and public works, but in the midst of his arduous labors he found time to prepare a large number of publications upon scientific and philosophical subjects. He was an earnest advocate of Government aid to railways, and the plan originally recommended by him as early as 1840 may be said to have formed the basis of the system now so generally adopted.

Mr. JOHNSON was for a time Mayor of the City of Middletown, Conn., where he resided, and also served that State as Senator, and although often urged to accept other responsible public offices, his devotion to his profession prevented his acceptance of political preferment.

In the early part of the war he was called to Washington by Secretary STANTON to consult upon a general plan of operations, and subsequently was tendered the command of one of the South-western Departments. He married a daughter of NATHANIEL SHALER, formerly a merchant of this City, and was a brother-in-law of the late Commodore MCDONOUGH. In every relation of private life Mr. JOHNSON possessed the highest esteem of all who knew him, and in his profession he was probably without a superior.

The Trial of James Costelloe for the Murder of Jack Glass—Acquittal of the Prisoner.

The trial of JAMES COSTELLOE for the killing of JACK GLASS was resumed yesterday in the Court of General Sessions before Judge BEDFORD. Dr. VANDERWATER, of Centre-street Hospital, testified that GLASS, whom he attended, died of pyemia and meningitis; none of the wounds were necessarily fatal. This closed the case for the prosecution, and JOHN LOFTUS, a Deputy Sheriff, was examined in relation to the character of GLASS. He stated that fifteen years ago he and GLASS were indicted for murder and were convicted. His services to Tammany subsequently procured him the position he now enjoys. FENTON C. MCELROY, the prisoner's former employer, gave him an excellent character. COSTELLOE then took the stand, and gave his evidence in a plain, straightforward manner. He detailed the circumstances of the case as already published, the terror with which GLASS inspired him, and his use of the knife in self-defense. Incidentally he stated that a Police officer who witnessed the row refused to interfere, and told them to settle it between them. The name of this officer could not be ascertained. The Judge remarked that every effort should be made to discover who he was, and have him immediately removed. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was discharged.

Our Corrupt Judges—Resolutions by the Fifteenth Ward Council of Political Reform.

The Fifteenth Ward Council of Political Reform met, on Thursday evening, A. R. WETMORE, presiding, and passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, It is, and for a long time has been, a notorious fact that, by reason of the scandalous, illegal and corrupt practices and conduct of certain Judges of the Courts in this City, public confidence in the proper administration of justice in such Courts no longer exists; and

Whereas, It appears by the late report of the Committee of the Bar Association, and from other sources, that abundant, clear and conclusive proofs have been furnished to the Assembly Judiciary Committe of this alarming and dangerous condition and tendency of affairs; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do hereby most urgently request the Legislature without delay to take such speedy action in this matter as the pure administration of justice requires and the well-known just, intelligent and determined public opinion of this community demands.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Council of Political Reform be and he is hereby instructed to furnish copies of these resolutions to the Press of the City for publication.

THE CASE OF EMMA R. COUCH.

She is Allowed to Withdraw Her Plea of Not Guilty—A Motion to Quash the Indictment.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, before Judge BEDFORD, Mr. HENRY L. CLINTON made application for permission to withdraw a plea of not guilty previously entered in the case of EMMA R. COUCH, who is charged with attempting to blackmail Rev. SAMUEL CARTER, with the view of a motion to quash the indictment. A few days ago the case of Miss COUCH was called in Court, and, as she did not answer, a bench-warrant was issued for her arrest. The day subsequently she was arrested, and, on being arraigned, pleaded not guilty. On that occasion he was not represented by counsel, and was immediately remanded. Mr. CLINTON'S motion was based on the fact that the defendant did not know the nature of the charge upon which she was called to plead, that the indictment, which was the longest on record, covered 170 pages, and that she was not afforded an opportunity to read it before her arraignment.

Mr. E. DELAFIELD SMITH, who was associated with Mr. CLINTON, said he understood that, after the examination before Judge DOWLING, the prosecution had virtually abandoned the case, and the error they sought now to remedy arose from this misapprehension of the facts.

Assistant District-Attorney SULLIVAN opposed the motion, and as he regarded Mr. SMITH'S remarks to imply an imputation against the District-Attorney's office he felt bound to state that no such intimation was given or intended. The case was one of the gravest importance to the entire community. The defendant he characterized as a fallen woman, and from the character and position of the reverend gentleman who made the complaint it was eminently proper that a speedy termination of the case should be had and all unnecessary delays prevented.

Mr. CLINTON warmly denounced the language of the District-Attorney as tending to prejudice the position of the defendant in the minds of the jury. He did not consider that his client received that fair and honorable treatment to which a person accused of crime is always entitled. When the investigation was in progress at the Tombs, Mr. DANIEL COUCH, of Dutchess County, the father of the defendant, even though he knew the charges preferred against his daughter were true, offered to take her home, and thus prevent the publicity and scandal which the matter has occasioned. Outside parties had manifested a disposition to persecute this young lady, and would leave nothing undone to injure and ruin her.

Mr. SMITH said that in all these proceedings there was no allegation that the charges made by Miss COUCH were untrue. He believed in their correctness, and from the statements she made and the circumstances she detailed he was thoroughly convinced that she was much more sinned against than sinning.

Mr. SULLIVAN—These declamations are made for the purpose of manufacturing public sentiment in her favor.

Mr. CLINTON replied that such was not their purpose. This indictment was ridiculous. They demanded a trial and this was all the pretext given to the District-Attorney to slander the defendant. He maintained that if Miss COUCH was tried on this indictment and acquitted she could be arrested the following day and arraigned on a new indictment.

Mr. SULLIVAN said if they had not time to examine the indictment it was singular how they knew it was ridiculous and would not stand an investigation. Finally, it was decided that Miss COUCH should be allowed to withdraw her plea of not guilty, the counsel to fix among themselves the day when the motion to quash the indictment was to be argued. In the meantime Miss COUCH was remanded.

The Gould-Gordon Suit—Plaintiff's Legal Fishing Excursion Stopped.

The case of JAY GOULD against GEORGE H. GORDON, alias Gordon Gordon, to recover $273,000 in stocks and property alleged to have been fraudulently obtained, the facts of which, as disclosed in the Court proceedings, have already appeared in the TIMES, was again up before Judge BRADY, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. It came up on a motion by DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, on behalf of plaintiff, to vacate an order of the Court staying an examination of defendant, under a previous order for that purpose, until a motion could be heard on Wednesday next, to vacate such orignal order.

Mr. FIELD made a formal motion to vacate the stay, claiming under the practice, that they were entitled to defendant's examination in order to obtain such facts as were necessary to enable plaintiff to frame his complaint. Two suits, he said, had been commenced against the defendant, in one an order of arrest had been obtained, but in the second a mere summons had been served, and the order now stayed was obtained to supply plaintiff with the information necessary to frame his complaint in the second action.

Mr. STRAHAN, on behalf of defendant, opposed the motion. The affidavits of plaintiff, he said, in the second suit showed upon their face that the basis of the suit was the alleged claiming from plaintiff of stocks and property under false and fraudulent representations; that such representations, if made, must necessarily be within the knowledge of plaintiff, and constituting, as they do, all that is necessary to allege in the complaint, no further information could be required by plaintiff to enable him to frame his complaint. This fact appearing broadly on the face of plaintiff's affidavits, it was clearly proper that the stay should be continued until Wednesday next, when a formal motion comes up to set aside the original order directing the examination to proceed.

Mr. FIELD replied that, proceeding on the supposition that defendant, representing himself a man of large wealth, owning $30,000 in Erie, got from plaintiff stocks and property amounting to about half a million, to be applied to certain specific purposes; that on the allegation that such property had been improperly disposed of this position would have the right, under this examination, to inquire what disposition had been made of the property; whether he still held possession of it, or had transferred to other parties, and, if transferred, to whom.

After some further unimportant discussion Judge BRADY said it was clear to him that plaintiff was entitled to such an examination of defendant as sought for; that plaintiff's own affidavits show the grounds of his action to be the obtaining of property on alleged false and fraudulent representations; that if the plaintiff parted with his property on such representations, they must necessarily be within his knowledge, and, therefore, he could need no further information in order to frame his complaint. After a careful scrutiny of all the papers presented, he, therefore, deemed it his duty to deny this motion, and continue the stay until a motion to vacate the original order can be made on Wednesday next.

The Chicago Contributions—The Receipts at the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. GEORGE WILSON, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, is preparing for the Press the roll of contributors to the Chicago Relief Fund through the Chamber. The number of subscribers is about 2,500, and the donations amounted to $1,030,395 50 in cash. The first to come forward with substantial aid, as recorded on the books of the Treasurer, were JAY COOKE & CO., HATCH, Illinois Central Railroad Company, and HENRY CLEWS & CO., all for large amounts, on the 10th of October, while the fire in Chicago was yet burning, and the last name on the list is under date of the 3d of the present month, being a contribution of $50 from a lady who modestly conceals her name under the initials "Miss A. J." The donations are in sums of from one cent to thousands of dollars. A squad of newsboys is credited with a respectable little charity, each of its members giving one penny as his mite. The accounts of the Treasurer will be embodied in the report and printed copies of the list of contribut

To Advertisers.

☞ For the accommodation of up-town residents, advertisements for insertion in the TIMES will be received at No. 54 West 32d-st., junction of Broadway and 6th-av.; No. 308 West 23d-st., opposite Grand Opera-house, and No. 1,241 Broadway, between 30th and 31st sts., at same rates as are charged at office of publication.

☞ The NEW-YORK TIMES has opened a branch office in Brooklyn at No. 44 Court-st opposite the City Hall, where advertisements will be received until 5 P. M.

☞ Throughout the Presidential canvass, we shall publish fuller reports of meetings and conventions in each State than any other New-York journal. The dispatches we are now receiving from Cincinatti and other points in the West afford examples of the thorough and impartial manner in which our correspondents will perform their work. Very full dispatches will be forwarded by telegraph, supplemented by careful letters. Our desire is to place before the public the latest and most trustworthy information, and we have made ample arrangements for that purpose.

The President has sent to the House of Representatives a message in response to a resolution, passed some time since, asking for information concerning the grounds of his action against the Kuklux in South Carolina. We commend it to the attention of citizens who have any inclination to support a coalition with the Democrats. It is a succinct and unvarnished statement of the nature and intent of the Kuklux conspiracy, showing that it dominated a dozen counties in one State, overrode the State laws, defied the Courts, and deprived a large class of citizens of their civil and political rights, and all this by the exercise of the most atrocious violence. We ask all rational and patriotic men what would be the effect on the now cowed Kuklux of a victory which they thought was a Democratic one, and also how an Executive elected by Democratic votes would be able to deal with them?

"Don't misrepresent facts—don't tell untruths"—is the excellent "code" laid down by HORACE GREELEY and his gushers. When do they mean to act up to it? Yesterday Mr. GREELEY stated that Mr. W. E. DODGE, Chairman of the Wednesday meeting, had given evidence against Mr. MURPHY before the Congressional Investigating Committee. A long patch of evidence is then quoted. Now, will it be credited that this story is a fabrication from beginning to end? Such is the fact. Mr. William E. Dodge was not even before the Committee in question, and never at any time or in any place gave the evidence put into his mouth by the Tribune. Is this what the schoolboy-essayists call "honorable journalism?" Most rational men will be disposed to regard it as a very bad form of cheating.

Ninety-seven members of the House were found, yesterday, to vote against Mr. WILLARD'S Civil Service Reform bill. On its merits, this bill is a fair subject for criticism, but the debates which have occurred at three separate times, go to show that the Republicans who opposed it are not in favor of any thorough civil service reform. They believe, with their leader and chief spokesman, Mr. B. F. BUTLER, that any measure of that kind is a device of the enemy, against which it is their duty to protect the President. But it is evident, from Mr. GARFIELD'S powerful speech, that the President is not only not desirous of Mr. BUTLER'S kind offices, but that he is in earnest in the civil service reform, and was so long before he had any avowed enemies in the Republican Party. Our own conviction is fixed that he has none so dangerous to him or to the country as the men who, in Congress, oppose and embarrass his repeated efforts for reform.

Now that it is apparent that Mr. GREELEY is drifting over to the Democracy, his affiliation with the Tammany Ring as Chairman of the Bogus Republican General Committee is intelligible. He intended to slip into the Democratic camp through that door. But when CONNOLLY, TWEED and their Ring associates came to grief, Mr. GREELEY marches off to Cincinnati with a Revenue Tariff plank on his shoulder as a peace-offering to the National Democracy. Meanwhile, the Democrats who go for a Hybrid Presidential nominee, do so for the purpose of drawing the Tribune into the support of Copperhead candidates for State officers.

The gushing essayists of the Tribune are not getting on very well in the task of reducing their theories to practice. Yesterday they fabricated two or three letters in praise of themselves, and added a few remarks in the same handwriting and style about the "code of journalism"—a subject on which a perpetual drizzle of hypocrisy is kept up in the Tribune office. If some of the young gentlemen, instead of lecturing on journalism so much, would work at it a little harder, it might be much better for them. They say it is wrong to commit a "fraud." Well, is it not a fraud to concoct a letter in a newspaper office, and then pretend that it comes from one of the public? That is a sweet little trick which the Tribune is constantly practicing. It says that its "code" is to tell the truth. Did it tell the truth when it called Senator TRUMBULL a traitor, a bribe-taker, and an infamous man? Did it tell the truth when it said, yesterday, that "TOM MURPHY" got up last Wednesday's meeting at the Cooper Institute? What do some of the people who think it so very wicked to "attribute motives" to the Schurz faction think of the tactics pursued by that faction toward its opponents?

The report of the majority of the Committee appointed to investigate the charges against Superintendent MILLER is, as will be perceived, entirely satisfactory to the public, and may be read with advantage by all who believed that MILLER was an "injured innocent." We trust that Mr. FOLEY'S resolution will be promptly acted on.

The Republican Party on Trial.

We are not of those who believe that the Republican Party will be eternal. Like all great organizations, it will do its part in history, and make way for something better adapted to the times. It has already won a name in American annals which will always be remembered with honor. It began with the highest enthusiasm and noblest purpose—the struggle with the most firmly-defended and powerful system of injustice which the world has seen. Though defeated, it renewed the struggle. By the madness of its adversaries, the contest was transferred from the field of politics to that of war, and the Republican Party became not merely the guardian of liberty, but the defender of the life of the nation. Through the most terrific civil contest of modern times, it led the councils as well as the military movements of the Northern people. Its present civil head guided its armies. Under his leadership, a struggle long doubtful, resulted in complete success.

The same great organization was then put on trial, as to its worthiness to lead the counsels of the nation in peace. The people decided by an overwhelming vote again to entrust the Republican Party with power. For nearly eight years, amid many difficulties, it has undertaken the immense task of governing a conqured district of vast size, of reuniting bostile States, of amalgamating a rebellious population with their conquerors, of bestowing rights upon a late servile and ignorant multitude and protecting them as wards trusted to the nation's honor. We do not assert that this most difficult and responsible labor has been perfectly performed. There are many things doubtless which could have been better done, and some which should have been left undone. There are delicate and perplexing questions not yet settled in the administration of the Southern States. Still we do confidently assert that there is no instance in history, where a great and conquering political party has administered such vast and complicated affairs so wisely and so safely.

Take the uniform experience of Europe in putting down rebellions and finishing revolutions. France exiled, after her religious civil wars, almost her whole Huguenot population. Still later, the excesses of the popular party, in 1793, left seeds of revolution and convulsion which have been ripening ever since. In England and Ireland the passions of the conquering party subjecting Ireland, have exposed that unhappy island to discord, discontent and civil war during every generation; and in England itself, the excesses of both Puritan and Royalist left wounds which time has hardly healed yet. When did ever a conquering party inaugurate toward rebels such mild and humane legislation, as the Republicans have done, ever since the surrender of LEE? Not a rebel leader has been executed; hardly one ever punished. Where is there an instance of more humane and wise administration than this same party has exercised toward the negroes? Under their wise guidance, emancipation, instead of being a convulsion, or the overthrow of all industrial interests, or the degradation of the laboring classes, as was feared, has been a healthful and invigorating change. Disregarding the prejudices of race, the Republicans have conferred the right of suffrage on these emancipated slaves as a means of protection. Wisely considering that in a Republic, education is the basis of liberty, they have provided for their mental training. To them, as to the whites, they have opened all offices and every career. To the surprise of the world, under such generous and judicious legislation, the blacks have shown themselves worthy of freedom. No excesses have been committed, no agrarian laws have been introduced, no prolétaire classes have been formed.

The negroes have produced the great crop of the South, to an extent, in value equal to the best under slavery. They are orderly, law-loving, and without a spirit of revenge toward the whites. They have used their liberties as well as any emancipated population was ever known to use them. If adventurers have here or there employed the negroes, to carry out personal and disgraceful ends, it is no more than our own white demagogues often do with our own lower class. The criticisms on the success of the Republican Party at the South are too much from an impracticable and doctrinaire stand-point. Where did any country or party ever succeed better with an emancipated people? What would our opponents have done?

More than this, this great party had the enormous problem to solve of paying off gradually one of the heaviest national debts of modern times, and at the same time of not burdening the people too severely. We do not assert that in this also they have done perfectly. We have often, as is well known, criticised the action of Congress keenly on this subject. Still, what party ever did better? Where was ever an instance known of such an immense amount of debt paid, and such great reduction of taxation brought about? The financial policy of the country may not have been perfectly wise, yet we stand now in an unexampled position of prosperity and financial success before the world.

Beyond all this, we had on our hands the interests of those unfortunate wards of the nation, the Indians. The policy which the party under Gen. GRANT has just introduced is certainly one which every right-minded man must approve. If it does not succeed it will not be because it is not humane or wise. No other party has ever offered a better. Now, this great organization, with all this record of grand successes, is again to be on trial before the people. We do not suppose, as we said in the beginning, that it is to be eternal. We do not suppose that all wisdom is inclosed within its ranks. Its day must come, like that of all parties. But we do not see that there is anything at this present election which should break it up. The real opponent of its policy—the Democratic Party—dare not enter the trial before the people. This alone is a testimony to its wise and successful career. If broken at all, it will only be by defection in its own ranks on merely personal issues.

The Responsibility for the Charter.

A great many sombre prophesies are being made in regard to the probable effects of the Committee of Seventy's Charter. The officials of whom it makes a clean sweep are, of course, very nearly united in the opinion that it will turn out a practical failure, and the majority af them will use their utmost efforts, between now and the date of election, to enable their prediction to be fulfilled. It cannot be too distinctly understood that the new charter has been passed in obedience to the almost unanimous demand of the citizens of New-York, and that on them alone rests the responsibility for its results. It was universally conceded that a system of local administration which allowed the tax-payers to be so shamefully robbed as TWEED'S Charter did, could be no longer tolerated. On the 7th of November last the people recorded their emphatic judgment on this point, and gave evidence, moreover, that they accepted the Committee of Seventy as the faithful custodians of the destines of Reform. It became the obvious duty of this body of representative citizens—a body whose collective character and abilities have never been surpassed in this community—to take the necessary steps, on behalf of the people, to reorganize the chaotic fabric of a condemned administration of local affairs. This duty involved the drawing up of a comprehensive scheme of City Government, by which existing abuses might be swept away and past errors might be remedied. A work like this required a combination of administrative experience, of legal ability, and of political foresight; it demanded close study, patient research and the exercise of both tact and judgment. The Committee of Seventy could fulfill all these requisites, and from no other local or State organization could they be expected. In common with the mass of Reformers, we, therefore, accepted the result of the Committee's labors as being the best charter we could possibly obtain under existing circumstances. Nobody pretends that it is an absolutely perfect instrument, or one in whose details actual experience may not reveal much that requires amendment; but the great majority of our citizens are perfectly content to give it a fair trial, and have every reason to be sanguine about its present and prospective influence in the field of local politics.

Seeing, therefore, that somebody had to be trusted, we trusted the Committee of Seventy; and now that their work is about to pass into law, we look for the co-operation of all honest men in giving due effect to its provisions. So far as can be judged, the representatives of the people have creditably discharged themselves of a delicate and difficult duty. On the third Tuesday of April, we hope to see that the people are equally mindful of the responsibility which now rests upon their shoulders. First, as we have frequently insisted, there is a careful and thorough house-to-house canvass to be made of the voters of the City. Before candidates can be selected on the principle of proportional representation, it is of course essential that the basis of representation should be accurately defined. If Reformers want to be adequately represented, they must do their best to facilitate the labor of the various associations who will take in hand the task of ascertaining their numbers. Should the Reform element exist in one Senatorial District in the proportion of two-thirds of the whole vote, it would, of course, be suicidal, besides involving a rejection of the minority principle, to nominate nine candidates to represent them. They are clearly entitled to have six out of the nine, but before these six can be put in nomination the proportionate strength of the Reformers in the district must be ascertained. A simple proviso like this applies to all the preparations for the approaching election of a Board of Aldermen and a Board of Education. It must be steadily borne in mind that on the character of the Aldermen will greatly depend the character of the heads of Departments. The legislative Department of the City Government must no longer be drawn from the ranks of third-rate Ward politicians. The position is one which involves, under the new charter, the exercise of powers which men of high character and standing ought to be found ready to assume. We have no doubt that the party of Reform will be able to secure the services of such men as have, of late years, been conspicuous by their absence from local politics. We trust that the utmost promptitude will be displayed in enabling their measures of preliminary organization to be perfected.

Senator Trumbull and Centralization.

The more closely one looks at the leaders of the Cincinnati movement, the more unsubstantial and unsatisfactory their promises of reform appear. We by no means deny that the movement will be sustained by some sincere Republicans, who hope to find in it real aid for certain reforms to which they attach great importance. But this class of adherents—or more properly speaking, this class of well-wishers—of the movement must be discouraged when they undertake to sift the professions and records of the men by whom the movement is engineered, to find how little more they have to hope for from them than from the legitimate organization of the Republican Party. Take, for instance, Mr. TRUMBULL'S attitude with reference to "centralization." There are a great many thoughtful men in the Republican Party who believe that the tendency to enlarge the sphere of the General Government and to trespass on the hitherto accustomed field of the State Governments is an actual and a dangerous one. They have some grounds for their belief. No one who has attentively studied the currents of public opinion and the methods of thought into which our legislators have fallen during the past twenty years, will deny that patriotic men of conservative mind may sincerely entertain grave fears upon this particular tendency in our Government. These men read Senator TRUMBULL'S emphatic statements. They know the responsible position he occupies as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate—a position which requires and enables him to watch closely the developments in legislation with reference to the Constitution. They naturally accept him as an authority, and believe that the evils he portrays exist in special magnitude under President GRANT, and they infer that the Senator can be relied on to oppose them. But in point of fact, the evils Mr. TRUMBULL enlarges upon are not the outgrowth of the period covered by Gen. GRANT'S Administration; and Senator TRUMBULL cannot be relied on to oppose them, because his record proves that when it was politic to do so, he fostered and even created them.

There has been a marked tendency of our Government toward centralization for many years. It was so even under the slave power. The Fugitive Slave law, the attempt to force slavery into the territories by aid of the Federal Executive, the curiously sweeping doctrines of the Dred Scott decision, showed its existence in the three Departments of the Government respectively. Pernicious as were these developments of the idea, the idea itself was the natural product of the growth of the country, of whose rapidly advancing power and dazzling increase in prestige, the Federal Government was the exponent. That this Government should attract to itself all the powers latent in the Constitution was inevitable, and had long been foreseen, (and desired as well,) not less by such staunch Democrats as JAMES MADISON and EDMUND RANDOLPH, of Virginia, than by the bolder HAMILTON, and the eccentric, but sagacious, GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, of our own State. When the war broke out, the powers of the Federal Government were, of course, taxed to the utmost, and every addition possible, by even forced interpretation of the Constitution, was made to them. When the rebellion collapsed, a still more trying emergency, calling for still more novel use of the Federal prerogatives, arose, and it was then that the severest strain was administered to the fundamental law. We were then called upon to uphold the white and negro Unionists of the South in rights which in the North were under the protection of the State Governments. It was in the performance of this task, more than in anything that has occurred under Gen. GRANT, that the accustomed interpretation of the Constitution was broken down.

In this work Senator TRUMBULL was a leader. It was he who contrived the Civil Rights bill, which, under the Thirteenth Amendment, prohibiting slavery, claimed for Congress the power to legislate for the enforcement of all the rights which the negroes possessed as freemen. This was a tremendous assumption, and far surpassed anything that can be attributed to the Kuklux law. The most that can be said against the latter is that it enforces the Fourteenth Amendment, by legislating for individuals instead of proceeding against States—a method open to question, but by no means palpably unconstitutional. But Mr. TRUMBULL'S bill did not seek to exercise unquestioned powers by doubtful methods. It sought to exercise powers concerning the very existence of which there was grave doubt. When it came before the Supreme Court it was decided to be unconstitutional on that ground. Yet the bill had been passed over the Presidential veto, and under vigorous pressure from Senator TRUMBULL, who lent it the full force of his authority, and the full advantage of his argumentative power. What does this record teach us of Senator TRUMBULL'S attitude toward centralization? Does it not show that in circumstances of political urgency he was its most strenuous advocate? Can he, then, be relied on to oppose centralized power should the Democratic Party make him President, and demand that they be allowed to use it in their own interest?

We might point out the utter disproportion between the danger threatened by centralization under the Republican Party, and that which would threaten the country from the same source under the Democratic Party. The difference arises from the essential difference in the aims of the two parties. But we reserve that for another day.

Mr. Rosa's Opera Season.

ADDISON tells us that angels can do no more than their best, and that the man who does his best "acts well" and "does nobly." Many are apt, in judging of the worth of any performance, to estimate it exclusively by standards of ideal excellence, without regard to what is practically attainable. For example, Mr. CARL ROSA'S bold and enterprising experiment in Italian opera, now going on at the Academy, is held by some to be open to certain obvious criticisms. By others, again, his efforts are regarded as in the highest degree meritorious. In other words, Mr. ROSA has done his very utmost to please the public and to do credit to his managerial fame; and, to borrow the thought of the author of Cato again, whether able to command success or not, he has certainly deserved it.

This, clearly, and in spite of any passing objections, is the opinion of the public. The Academy has been packed as it was never packed before to listen to Mr. ROSA'S combination. Each night the overflow from the seats has choked the aisles, the boxes have been filled to their utmost capacity, and the vast amphitheatre has boasted a sea of heads such as we never saw there before. If this had not been the case, Mr. ROSA would have been a heavy loser; and this is what is, perhaps, not generally understood. Some have grumbled at the high prices charged. This is certainly unreasonable, since, at the rates of the Nilsson season, the combination must have sung nightly to a loss, even had every seat been sold. When one artist of the four receives a clear third of the gross receipts, it will be seen that close calculating is needful to pay the other three, besides the cost of the rest of the company, chorus, rent, orchestra, gas, printing, and other inevitable charges. We are told that the receipts of the first week came up to twenty-four thousand dollars. At this rate, the opera has paid a profit; but it would not have done so with much less. We do not agree in the opinion that there was any possible risk of bad business with the combination; but, of course, all did not think alike, and Mr. ROSA'S courage and public spirit, in shouldering the chance of a heavy deficit, is most praiseworthy.

As regards the artistic value of these memorable performances, opinions also, and very naturally, differ. But apart from their prodigious attractiveness, which must be accepted in a measure as a test of desert, it may fairly be asked with relation to this quartet, where can you find a better? In what European opera-house at this moment can you find, singing nightly in conjunction, four artists like SANTLEY, WACHTEL, PAREPA and PHILLIPS? It is all very well to criticise particular performances or special selections. Some of us may have heard this or that song, scena or concerted piece better interpreted, according to our lights, and may feel disposed to apply that severe habit of criticism which consists in comparing the immediate present with, so far as we know it, the whole of the past. But, granting this experience and this privilege, we imagine that in all fairness the combination must be confessed to be without precedent, and thus to justify the public taste which has made the houses so. It is to be borne in mind, whatever hypercriticism may be brought to bear on the subject, that each of the four great singers of the combination has a first-rate European reputation; and that each has been repeatedly the central and sufficing attraction of a lyric entertainment. Mr. SANTLEY is admitted to be the foremost of baritones; Mme. PAREPA is the queen of florid vocalization; Mr. WACHTEL has a voice that is literally amazing, and a magnetic power that those who find most fault with his style are yet compelled to admit, and Miss ADELAIDE PHILLIPS, the first of American contraltos, and withal one of our best actresses, has firm hold of the popular affection. Last night, in presence of a magnificent audience, these singers won a fresh triumph in "Lucrezia Borgia,"—an opera giving splendid opportunities to all four; today "Il Trovatore," which obstinately refuses to be shelved, is to be sung, and next week we are to have "William Tell."

With next week the season ends. Its financial prosperity is already assured; but we hold it only fair to give honor to whom honor is due, and to thank Mr. ROSA, in the name of the public, for an artistic achievement that is without a parallel. It is well known that Mr. ROSA, unlike some managers, has a genuine respect for art, and an honest desire for its elevation. He has probably made very little money by his present experiment, his expenses being simply enormous. And we are heartily glad, however, that Mr. ROSA has won enviable repute without actually losing money, in an enterprise which has proved, among other things, that the people of New-York will support on the lyric stage, with unbounded liberality, that which is really attractive: and that, as we have often urged, the general mistake of managers hitherto has consisted not in spending too much on their operas, but too little. Whenever Mr. ROSA returns here, he will find a cordial greeting, for he has kept all his promises, treated the public with entire good faith—more than can be said for some "impressarios" whom we have seen here.

MINOR TOPICS.

It would be timely for the St. Louis Westliche Post, CARL SCHURZ'S paper, to reprint the eloquent articles in which, in March, 1861, it indignantly denounced CARL SCHURZ'S insolent presumption to demand a leading foreign mission in the name of the German Republicans.

TOM FIELDS, who, greatly to the public disgust, continues to dishonor a seat in a Republican House of Assembly, avowed his intention, in one of his accustomed harangues, to join the Cincinnati movement for the purpose of "smashing" the Republican Party. He has already, along with TWEED, CONNOLLY and SWEENY, "smashed" the Democratic Party. It is to be hoped that DAVID D. and "TOM" sandwiched between GREELEY and MANIERRE, will put in an appearance at Cincinnati. The hybrid demonstration, thus adorned, would become decidedly sensational, and so far as results are concerned, as decidedly—a "fizzle."

Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper for April 6, 1861, contained an excellent full-page engraving of the office-seekers in the ante-room of the White House besieging President LINCOLN after his first inauguration. The two most prominent figures in this engraving were CARL SCHURZ, in an attitude of utter despair, and HORACE GREELEY comforting him in his distress. FRANK LESLIE should now republish that spirited engraving.

Yesterday, EMMA COUCH, the young woman who attempted to black-mail Rev. Dr. CARTER, withdrew her plea of "not guilty." She thus confesses her crime and hopes, by virtue of that confession, to escape punishment. There is no possible virtue in a confession of guilt when the evidence against the criminal is conclusive. The punishment of this woman is necessary to the safety of the community, especially as she has induced a wild Bohemian to give renewed currency to her lies. Her counsel will now attempt to show that she is thoroughly repentant, and that it would be a "cruel" thing to persist in prosecuting a repentant woman. He will say nothing about the cruelty of attempting to blast the character of an exemplary man.

Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS delivered an address to working men in Boston on Thursday night, in which he promised that if they would stand by one another they should elect a President in 1876. It is singular that Mr. PHILLIPS should postpone this happy occurrence so long. It would have been quite as easy to prophecy the election of Judge DAVIS next Fall, and such a prophecy would have been much more pleasant to his audience. Mr. PHILLIPS further said that he wanted to have affairs so regulated that money should be worth three per cent. instead of ten, and that all working men should have gardens, books, and beautiful things generally. Every humane man will join in the latter wish, although the impossibility of its realization is perfectly evident. Legislation cannot make all men rich, neither would a fall in the price of money bring to the working men any of the benefits which Mr. PHILLIPS fancies would follow.

The curiosities of criticism would make a most interesting chapter of a new series of the curiosities of literature. The Herald, a day or two since, contained a strikingly original criticism of the performance of "Il Trovatore" at the Academy. The writer found fault with the interpretation of the part of "Leonardo," and also asserted that though Miss PHILLIPS' singing was "emphatic and effective," and characterized by "dramatic power," "sweetness and sympathetic feeling," that artist suffers from a "malformation of the throat which cannot be remedied." The critic highly approved of WACHTEL'S singing of a "cantaville," and unhesitatingly affirmed that "there was a complete absence of the constantly recurring defect of unevenness of singing in the rendering of this song." A "cantaville" is undoubtedly a very peculiar sort of thing, but that it can be characterized by a complete absence of a defect which constantly recurs, is hardly credible. A much more probable assertion is that which credits Mr. SANTLEY with much sweetness in singing "Il balm." If there is anything which ought to be sweet and soft it is a "balm" of any kind, and therefore what the critic says of SANTLEY may be easily believed. He adds: "The same tenderful sweetness combined with perfect clearness, and the purety in the notes as they weeled fourth characterized his vocalization as on former occasions." Is not this the perfection of criticism?

It is hardly worth while to discuss the character of MAZZINI at this late day. The genius, the nobility and the faults of the man are buried with him. Still, when the assertion is so freely made that he never approved of assassination, a proper respect for the truth of history forbids that it should pass unnoticed. He was not concerned in ORSINI'S attempt to assassinate NAPOLEON, for the reason that he was then at bitter feud with ORSINI. He did, however, instigate a follower to assassinate CHARLES ALBERT, and lent his own dagger for the purpose. The strongest evidence against him, however, is found in one of his letters, in which he recommended the formation of a band of eighty Italian youth, armed with daggers and sworn to assassinate all the Austrian officials in Lombardy and Venice. A more extensive scheme of assassination was never devised, and the letter, bearing MAZZINI'S own signature, is a sufficient refutation of the assertion that he was a mild theorist who never consented to use the dagger for political ends.

AMUSEMENTS.

ITALIAN OPERA.

"Lucrezia Borgia" was sung at the Academy last evening. The performance was one of the best of the season. Mr. SANTLEY suffered from a slight cold, but the voices of the other artists were in excellent condition, and the general work of interpretation was unexceptionable. Mme. PAREPA-ROSA sings with infinite taste the music allotted to Lucrezia, and her acting constantly gathers animation and force. The tender "Com'è bello" in the first act, when the duchess is wrapt in contemplation of the slumbering Gennaro; the passionate "Ami tua mad re;" the defiant allegro agitato with which, commencing with the words "Oh! a te bada! Lucrezia braves her husband; the dramatic "Infelice," and the cavatina, "M'odi, ah m'odi," were all recited by Mme. ROSA with unerring surety and ease, and with a variety of accent fully equal to the exactions of the part. Herr WACHTEL was heard to great advantage as Gennaro. His magnificent tones were as effective as ever in the concerted passages of the opera, and his recital of the single tenor air—"Di pescatore"—was distinguished by more tasteful phrasing than several better-known efforts. Herr WACHTEL'S appearance and bearing were, of course, all that could be desired. He is not the warmest of actors, but the effect of his fine stage-presence is never injured by any lack of vivacity or any awkwardness; and after he leaves us, it will be a difficult matter to become reconciled to the concert-room doings of most Italian tenors. Mr. SANTLEY'S personation of Il Duca was marked by the quiet power discoverable in each of his delineations, and his scene with Lucrezia, in act the second, was decidedly impressive without being sensational. His vocal rendering of "Vieni, la mia vendetta," and of the succeeding allegro was, naturally, perfection. Hoarseness interfered somewhat yesterday with the steadiness of Mr. SANTLEY'S sustained notes, but the delicious fluency of his delivery was none the less apparent. Miss ADELAIDE PHILLIPS supplied a capital picture of Maffio Orsini, and sang the brindisi, "Il segreto per esser felice," with spirit and brilliancy. It will be a pleasure to listen to a second rehearsal of "Lucrezia Borgia" by these performers. Last night's rendering was unquestionably a treat, and evidence of its appreciation was not wanting. Mme. ROSA and Herr WACHTEL were enthusiastically recalled after the second act; Mr. SANTLEY'S "Vieni" was redemanded, but not conceded, and the drinking-song by Miss PHILLIPS was repeated. These, however, were but a few of the agreeable incidents of the entertainment. The chorus was throughout proficient, and the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. CARL ROSA, whose industry is on a plane with his talent, would have done credit to any opera-house in the world. At the matinée to-day "Il Trovatore" will be the attraction. "Martha" is to be represented on Monday.

THE BOSTON JUBILEE.

Miss CARLOTTA PATTI, we learn, has been approached with offers of engagement for the Boston jubilee. The acceptance of Mr. GILMORE'S proposals would make it necessary for the lady to leave Europe at an earlier date than had been decided upon. A longer sojourn in the United States than was at first intended, would surely give the public no cause for complaint.

BENEFIT FOR M. JUIGNET.

M. PAUL JUIGNET will benefit by a representation of French plays to occur at Bryant's Opera-house, in Twenty-third-street, near Sixth-avenue, on Tuesday evening next. The gentleman has striven hard for many years to place the French drama on a firm basis in New-York, and if he has not yet been successful, his struggles are none the less notable and deserving of a more substantial recognition than late entertainments have called out. The programme arranged for Tuesday holds forth a promise that attendance will be a matter of pleasure as well as of duty. One portion of the programme will be unusually attractive. A rehearsal of MUSET'S "Le Caprice" is to make known to the audience Miss CARLOTTA LECLERCQ as a French comédienne. Two other pieces—"Alexandre Dumas Fils," an apropos suggested by the recent appearance of the well-known dramatist as a reformer of the morals of the nation; and "Un Service à Blanchard"—will also be acted. We hope the house will be crowded.

THE KUKLUX OUTRAGES.

Message of the President on the Condition of the Outlaw Counties of South Carolina.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The President transmitted the following message to the House today:

To the House of Representatives:

In answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives, of Jan. 25, I have the honor to submit the following, accompanied by the report of the Attorney-General, to whom the resolution was referred:

Representations having been made to me that in certain portions of South Carolina a condition of lawlessness and terror existed, I requested the then Attorney-General (Mr. AKERMAN) to visit the States, and, after personal examination, to report to me the facts in relation to the subject. On the 18th of October last he addressed a communication from South Carolina, in which he stated that in the Counties of Spartanburg, York, Chester, Union, Laurens, Newbury, Fairfield, Lancaster and Chesterfield there were combinations for the purpose of preventing the free political action of citizens who were friendly to the Constitution and the Government of the United States, and of depriving the emancipated class of the equal protection of the laws. These combinations embrace at least two-thirds of the active white men of those counties, and have the sympathy and countenance of the majority of the other third. They are connected with similar combinations in other counties and States, and no doubt are part of a grand system of criminal associations pervading most of the Southern States. The members are bound to obedience and secrecy by oaths which they are taught to regard as of higher obligation than the lawful oaths taken before civil Magistrates; they are organized and armed; they effect their objects by personal violence, often extending to murder; they terrify witnesses; they control juries in the State Courts and sometimes in the Courts of the United States; systematic spying is one of the means by which prosecution of the members is defeated. From information given by officers of the State of the United States, and by credible private citizens, I am justified in affirming that the instances of criminal violence perpetrated by these combinations within the last twelve months in the above named counties could be reckoned by thousands.

I received information of a similar import from various sources, among which were the Joint Committee of Congress upon the Outrages, the officers of the State, the military officers of the United States on duty in South Carolina, the United States Attorney and Marshal and other officers of the Government, repentant members, members of those unlawful organizations, persons specially employed by the Department of Justice to detect crimes against the United States, and from other credible sources. Most if not all of this information, except that I derived from the Attorney-General, came to me orally, and was to the effect that said counties were under the sway of powerful combinations popularly known as the "Kuklux Klan," the objects of which were by force and terror to prevent all political action not in accord with the views of the members, to deprive colored citizens of the right to bear arms, and of the right to a free ballot, to suppress schools in which colored children were taught, and to reduce the colored people to a condition closely akin to that of slavery; that these combinations were organized and armed, and had rendered the local law ineffectual to protect the classes whom they desired to oppress; that they had perpetrated many murders and hundreds of crimes of minor degree, all of which were unpunished, and that the witnesses could not safely testify in Courts there unless the more active members were placed under restraint.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, April 19, 1872.

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

Continuation of the Investigation Before the Special Committee.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The Naval Investigating Committee, to-night, heard Mr. CORLISS make a statement relative to the machinery made by him for the steamer Saco. According to the report of the Board of Engineers the main engine worked admirably, and they recommended that all the machinery be taken out except the main engine, the propeller and the shafting. Witness admitted the boiler was a failure. In view of the report he asked Engineer ISHERWOOD that the experiment be continued, but the latter did not consent, and required the machinery to be taken out, which was done, mainly at the expense of witness.

Chief-Engineer ISHERWOOD was recalled, and stated the conversation he had with Mr. SARGENT, a member of the Committee. It was to the effect that the witness thought the contract with JOHN ROACH was an improper contract, and, therefore, ought not to have been made; he thought so now; the witness said in reply to Mr. ROBESON that he heard of the contract with ROACH at the New-York Navy-yard, and afterward applied to Secretary ROBESON to superintend the machinery of the Tennessee, at the same time telling him that if he had other views, he (the witness) would be satisfied.

Secretary ROBESON—And you came to me apparently on friendly terms. Did you say anything to me about the nature of the contract, or that the Government had been wronged?

WITNESS—No, Sir; and now I will ask what would you have said if I had mentioned that the contract was an improper one, and disadvantageous to the Government?

Secretary ROBESON—If you had said such engines could have been put into the Tennessee for $250,000, I should have said I would investigate the matter.

WITNESS—If I had known that, I should have spoken to you about the matter.

Second Controller BROADHEAD could not account for the discrepancy between the check for payment for the loss of the steamer Governor and the voucher—the difference being $500.

JOHN M. BUTLER, clerk for S. P. BROWN'S son, gave an account of the payment made on account of the steamer Governor.

JOHN ROACH recalled—Said he would sell all the machinery taken out of the Tennessee for $35,000; he would sell the boilers for $12,000, and the line-shafting for $6,000; the old machinery is his profit; the responsibility he assumed; the ten new boilers for the Tennessee will cost him $180,000.

The Chairman said he did not desire to call any other witnesses.

Mr. SARGENT remarked that he desired to ask Secretary ROBESON some questions, but, as it was now 10 o'clock, he would defer doing so till Monday night.

Senator CRAGIN testified he had been a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs for seven years; he knew the SECORS, who were men of high character; Mr. GRIMES was chairman of that Committee when the act appropriating $115,000 for settlement of their claims was passed; he thought it was CHARLES SECOR who said to him that he was doubtful about taking the money, as it might bar him from obtaining the further amount Government owed him; witness advised him to take the money, and told him he thought his other claims would not be barred thereby.

Secretary ROBESON said he wanted to call the Pay-master to explain the discrepancy between the voucher and the check in the payment for the loss of the GRAINS OF THOUGHT.

Antidote to Democratic Poison—The Facts About Our Party, as Opposed to Fiction—Paragraphs Worth Reading and Remembering.

There is a great deal in the speeches and letters laid before the meeting at Cooper Institute, on Wednesday, which is too good to be lost. We hope the speeches in full have been attentively considered by our readers, but the few extracts which we here bring together will repay a second perusal. Let them be treasured up for future comparison with the "envenomed attacks" of SCHURZ & Co.:

THE TONE OF FEELING IN THE SOUTH.

The people of the South, when they attempted the overthrow of the Government, assumed all the responsibilities of the result; they intended to secure the perpetual slavery of the blacks; they failed, and the result of freedom and enfranchisement is felt to be an awful punishment. They cannot stand the idea of seeing their former slaves in many cases their political equals; but they really can have none but themselves to blame. They have a special dislike to Gen. GRANT, as he was the successful leader of the army which finally subdued them. I have recently returned from an extended visit South, and with few exceptions, I found the leading men watching with great interest the progress of the Presidential campaign North. They remember that the Democratic party, with some noble exceptions, were opposed to the war, and in Congress and out, during its progress, predicted and apparently hoped for failure. They are now hoping for the success of the Democratic party, anticipating in that event that in some way—they do not see exactly how—the freedmen are to be made their political slaves, and their influence in a great measure destroyed. Their great hope now is in the success of the "Reform" movement, backed up, as they anticipate, by the Democrats, which, if successful, will give that party the control of the Government.—Speech of William E. Dodge.

THE TRUE ORIGIN OF THE "LIBERAL REPUBLICAN" MOVEMENT.

In the South one-half of its leaders adhere to the Confederate flag. The other half are endeavoring to outmove the carpet-baggers in an effort to secure the negro vote, and here in New-York, Tammany Hall, that died out last year in the members of the Ring, is seeking resurrection this year in the Liberal Republican movement. Tammany Hall is fearfully and wonderfully made. Her ways are wily and deep. She takes many shapes. Having lost all favor for herself in the public eye, she offers the Presidency to some Republican of her own choosing, and from her wits and wiles is born the Liberal Republican revelation.—Speech of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles.

SENATOR FENTON AS A REFORMER.

GOV. FENTON has become in the Senate the champion of Reform in the administration of the Federal Government. And it is deeply to be regretted that he went through four years of office as Governor of New-York, from 1864 to 1868, without availing himself of any of his numerous opportunities to practice as Governor the style of executive reform that he defends as a Senator. Among the many opportunities offered him for the introduction of reform, "and purely of the Government in the State and nation," I well remember the infamous Tax Levy passed by the Legislature of 1868, and which he was in vain urged by the best of his political friends to veto. That Tax Levy, as GOV. FENTON well knew, was the result of a deliberate plan to plunder the over-taxed people of this City of millions and millions, for the double purpose of enriching its framers, corrupting the Legislature that passed it, and depriving the Republican Party of the vote of New-York at the approaching Presidential election. Nevertheless, GOV. FENTON approved the act—and this he did in spite of the almost unanimous protest of our leading citizens, without distinction of party.—Gen. Sickles.

FACTS ABOUT SENATOR TRUMBULL.

I may be permitted to say that SENATOR TRUMBULL obtained his seat in the Senate of the United States many years ago by a daring defiance of the Constitution of his own State. If my memory serves me, he held a high judicial office in Illinois when he was chosen to the Senate from the Legislature. The Constitution of Illinois provided that no judicial officer should be eligible to election to any other office during his term as Judge. Nevertheless, Senator TRUMBULL's friends in Illinois, with the full approval of their leader, disregarded the State Constitution and elected him, and the Senator successfully claimed at the hands of the Senate the seat in that body against the protests of DOUGLAS, by the nullification of so much of the Constitution of the State as stood in his way. Nor has Senator TRUMBULL been more fortunate in adapting his practice to his polemics in respect to the equilibrium of the several branches of the Federal Government. In the famous McArdle case, which was understood to involve the power of the Executive in the execution of the Reconstruction acts of Congress, Senator TRUMBULL was employed by the Executive for a fee of $10,000, which was fixed in appreciation of his distinction at the Bar, to argue that case before the Supreme Court of the United States. He made, as was generally conceded, a very able argument, but he nevertheless seems to have doubted either his ability to convince the Court, or the disposition of the Court to be convinced; and the thereupon successful exercise of his great influence on Congress as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate to put through an act taking away the jurisdiction of the Court, so that they could not decide the case against him. I don't discover in either of these incidents a better leader in the path of civil service reform or State rights than I am able to find among these honored statesmen who propose to seek their choice as heretofore, within the ranks of the Republican organization.—Gen. Sickles.

CHARACTER OF GEN. GRANT.

Of all the men I have seen in high station, there is not one with less pride of opinion or of place; not one more ready to revise his own judgments and weigh the suggestions of others; not one more anxious to do all things well, than he whose re-election you will aid to secure. No Administration, no party, no majority in Congress has ever so remorselessly investigated, purged and punished its own offenses; none was ever so courageous in meeting accusations, however ungratuitous or unpatriotic. When the many committees now searching for abuses shall report all their discoveries, the country will be struck by the contrast between the truth and the allegations, and not less by the contrast between the record of the present Administration and most of its predecessors.—Senator Conkling's Letter.

THE PEOPLE AND THE PRESIDENT.

During the Winter just ended I have held Courts in different places from Wyoming County to Albany, and I can truly say that the masses of the Republican Party are unmistakably in favor of re-electing President GRANT. They know he is honest, and a safe and prudent Executive. They regard him as good a President as we have had since the organization of the Government. They are grateful to him for his great services in crushing the rebellion, for which the outside sympathizers and abettors of the Cincinnati movement hate him. They know he has no policy to enforce against the patriotic will of the people, and that he conforms to the acts of Congress. They readily forgive his errors and mistakes, because he is great enough to correct them himself. They love him for his virtues, and will re-elect him President.—Letter from Judge Balcom.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

I cannot shut my eyes to the dangers of Republican divisions—dangers not only to the party itself and its future, but to the nation and its future also. Nor can any one else shut his eyes to the fact that the grandest reforms which the country owes to the fidelity of the Republican organization, were carried through when its unity and permanency were warred on by foes from its own household, who proclaimed, as is now again proclaimed, that its usefulness and ability to achieve great results had ended, and that the time had arrived for new affiliations. What it has done since then is, however, a noble heritage to bequeath to our children, forming, as the record does, some of the brightest pages of our country's annels; and I have no fear, when impartial history records the administrative results of American Executives of our times, but that side by side with the once bitterly-criticised, but now universally honored, ABRAHAM LINCOLN, will be found the name of ULYSSES S. GRANT.—Letter from Vice-President Colfax.

OFFICE-HOLDERS AND THE PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION.

They talk about this Convention in Philadelphia as being an office-holders' Convention. Suppose we say the Convention of Cincinnati is to be an office-seekers' convention. I won't say it. You can think what you will about it [laughter]; but this much I do say, the National Convention that will meet this year at Philadelphia will have fewer office-holders in it, and fewer members of Congress than any Convention that has met in thirty years of the party in power. The office-holders have had little to do about it. In looking over the list of the delegates of eight States, I find only five office-holders elected from them all. I want you to remember this and take it home with you. Now, I will tell you how this matter is. You go to the sections of our country where they have no office-holders and you will find the Republican Party united, supporting the measures of the Administration and almost unanimous for GRANT. [Applause.] But you go to the places like your own City of New-York, where you have got a vast number of office-holders, and you have dissensions and divisions. And I tell you, to-night, it is this office-holding, and office-seeking, and these little personal and petty ambitions that are disturbing the unity of the Republican Party, and inviting disaster. The great ideas, principles, and policy of the Republican Party today are stronger than the Republican Party itself; and you know it, and I know it.—Senator Wilson's Speech.

MILITARY SECRETARIES.

Mr. TRUMBULL told us that we had passed a law that military men should not do civil duties. Gentlemen, I am sorry he told you that, because it is not the fact. We did not pass any such law. We have a law that will not allow military men to be appointed to civil offices. But we have no law that prevents a man who is in the army from being detailed to do some civil duty. Mr. TRUMBULL complained that we had a military man—a man in the army, who brought the President's Message to him. Well; I think if Mr. TRUMBULL had looked into the history of the country a little, he would have found that that thing had been done before. The first message ever sent to the Senate of the United States, was sent on the 7th of August, 1789, and it was borne by Major-Gen. HENRY KNOX, a gentleman who carried more than one message from Gen. WASHINGTON to the Senate of the United States. He had been his companion-in-arms during the war, and, perhaps, his most intimate personal friend. When Gen. JACKSON came in he appointed his old Aid, Major DONELLSON, Secretary. When Gen. TAYLOR came in he took his Aid, Major BLISS, (his son-in-law,) and kept him with him as long as he lived, when Major BLISS went back into the army. When Mr. LINCOLN came in he made JOHN HAY an army officer and then detailed him for duty in the White House. When ANDY JOHNSON came in, he filled the White House with military men. I have here a list of some of them. Now, when a Senator leaves his place in the Senate at Washington and goes up and down speaking to people, he ought to know what he talks about. He ought to understand the plain facts of history. I never read a speech in my life so full of errors in so short a space of a couple of columns as I found Mr. TRUMBULL's speech. He asks the question, "Had ANDY JOHNSON filled the White House with officers, what would have been said about it?" Well, I will tell you whom he had there. He had Col. Morne, Col. Morrow, Col. Long, Col. Reeves, Gen. Muzzy, Col. McKeever, and Col. Robert Johnson, his own son-in-law. He had five officers of the army with him, and I will tell you what else he had. He had a company of troops—he had guards posted outside the White House, around it, and inside of it. When Gen. GRANT came in, the guards saluted him, and the General asked what it meant. The next day he sent the guards away, and in a few days he sent away the four companies of cavalry that were stationed at Washington, together with a regiment of infantry; and there has not been, for the past two or three years, a soldier on duty nearer to Washington than Fort Washington, away down on the Potomac. [Applause.]—Senator Wilson.

A PREDICTION.

Now, gentlemen, Mr. SCHURZ made a prediction the other night, and he closed with the declaration that their banners would float over the dome of the Capitol in a twelve-month. Now I will make a prediction here to-night, and I want you to remember it as long as you remember Mr. SCHURZ's prediction, and that prediction is this: That if the nominees at Cincinnati are not supported by the Democratic Party of the country, they will not have an electoral vote in the Union, [applause;] that if they are supported by the Democratic Party, we will carry from twenty-five to thirty States of the Union for Gen. GRANT. [Applause.]—Senator Wilson.

WHO IS IN FAVOR OF AMNESTY?

The House of Representatives last Winter passed a bill granting complete amnesty to all but three classes of rebels: first, those who had been in the Congress of the United States at the beginning of the rebellion, and who went out and engaged in the rebellion; second, those who had been in the army of the United States, and who left the army and carried their swords over into the rebel army; and third, those who had been members of the secession conventions in the Southern States, and there voted to carry their States out of the Union and into the rebellion. But it excepted such men as DAVIS, TOOMBS, STEPHENS and BRECKINRIDGE, the men that made the rebellion, and who were responsible for that greatest of all crimes of history. That bill passed the House and came to the Senate. There it was amended, so as to give civil rights to the colored people, making them equal to their late masters, the late rebels. The bill thus amended was put on its final passage, and under the Constitution it required a two-thirds vote. It lacked just three votes of having a two-thirds vote; and if Senators TRUMBULL and TIPTON had voted for it, and if Senator SCHURZ had remained in the Senate and voted for it, instead of stepping out at that unfortunate time, the bill would have passed. Why did they refuse to vote for that bill? Because it did not give amnesty to the ringleaders of the rebellion, and because it carried on it as a rider an amendment which gave complete civil rights to the colored people of the United States. Now I am not in favor of universal amnesty myself. I am willing to grant amnesty to all except the great criminals, the authors of the rebellion. I voted to give amnesty to all but these three classes, and I can say that so long as I have a vote in the Senate of the United States, I never will consent to give amnesty to JEFFERSON DAVIS. [Tremendous and long-continued applause.]—Speech of Senator Morton.

WILL THE NORTH PAY FOR THE SOUTHERN SLAVES?

If the Democratic Party gets into power, do you expect that the Southern Democracy will tax themselves to pay the interest on the debt that was contracted for their subjugation, while their own is left unprovided for? They invested their money in Confederate stocks and bonds. They lost everything. They lost their slaves—a property they valued at thousands of millions of dollars. They were comparatively impoverished. When you have put them in power, and they have the power to vote taxes or not to vote taxes, is any man weak enough to believe that they will voluntarily tax themselves to pay the interest on your debt without some corresponding compensation made to them? What will it be? Will it be the payment of the Confederate debt? I don't know. I am inclined to think it will take the direction of paying them for their slaves. There is no man in the South today, so far as I know, who lost slaves, who is not looking forward to that event. I met a very distinguished Southern gentleman at West Point last Summer—a man that you all know by reputation; and I will give you his name, because it was not said in confidence to me, but was said in the presence of others; one of the noblest and purest men of the South, and a loyal man throughout the war, and one of the largest slave-holders throughout the South, Gov. AIKEN, of South Carolina. He believed slavery to have been unlawfully abolished, and he said, "I have made out an inventory of my slaves and laid it aside, because I believe that a sense of returning justice will yet compel the nation to pay for the slaves;" and so far as I know, this has been done by almost the entire body of the former slave-owners of the Southern States. When the Democratic Party comes into power, they will come forward with that claim, and they will say to the Democracy, and say truly, "You are committed in favor of paying us for our slaves."—Senator Morton.

THE DANGER BEFORE US.

I believe the time will come, unless there shall be a continual verdict of this nation to the contrary, when we shall be asked to pay for the slaves. If the Democratic Party comes into power they cannot refuse it. They will say, "Let bygones be bygones; let us make everything right and equal; let us pay the debts on both sides, pension the soldiers on both sides, and then we will have an era of good feeling and universal fraternity." I am drawing no fancy sketch. These things are actually at your threshold. They are dependent on the return of the party to power. Remember that that party is committed against every measure that was necessary to put down the rebellion. They are committed against your whole financial system. They are committed against the national bank system from first to last. They are committed against your currency in its present form. They are in favor of State sovereignty.—Senator Morton.

Consecration of the Jewish Temple of Ahawath Chesed.

The consecration of the Jewish temple of "Ahawath Chesed," corner of Lexington-avenue and Fifty-fifth-street, took place yesterday afternoon. The temple, which cost $250,000, is of New Jersey stone, with trimmings from Ohio quarries. It is of the Moorish style of architecture, and finished inside with black walnut woodwork, trimmed with white oak. The painting is in dark colors, with profuse gilding. The audience present at the dedication ceremonies numbered nearly 3,000. The ceremonies consisted of the consecration prayer and sermon by Rev. Dr. A. HUHBSCH, Rabbi of the congregation, a procession by children dressed in white, singing by the choir and the placing of the scrolls in the ark.

Fine Diamonds.

While it is true that there is a world-wide value for diamonds in general, there is now more than ever before a critical taste for gems. By the term "gem" we mean such diamonds as approach perfection in shape, material, cutting, and lustre. There is as much difference between diamonds as there is between the brilliance of an hydro-oxygen jet and the sparkle of an ordinary flame.

Some gems possess a latent brilliancy and intense fire which are quite marvelous; examined critically they reflect at every turn the most brilliant rays, causing persons who never supposed that they could be attracted by any stone to experience real pleasure from their examination.

Their forms: Indifference arose from their never having had an object worthy of study, rather than from their dullness of vision.

Messrs. STARR & MARCUS, No. 22 John-street, (upstairs.) New-York, offer a large stock of Diamond Jewelry, containing many incomparably fine gems well worthy the examination of connoisseurs.

Like paintings by MEISSONIER, which are not valued by the extent of canvas covered, but from the charming ideal and masterly execution exhibited, so fine gems are sought for, not on account of size or weight, but for the intrinsic fascination they possess.—Harper's Weekly.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

SUNDAY EDITION.

THE DAILY TIMES of Sunday, April 21, will contain many features of special interest to the general reader.

Among the original sketches specially prepared for this edition will be found one giving the experiences of AN AMATEUR BEGGAR, who spent a day in the Bowery and Broadway, disguised as a mendicant. The writer describes those who gave him alms and how the dole was bestowed, besides affording an insight into human nature in the streets, as viewed from a mendicant point of view. The article cannot fail to be interesting, as it gives information obtained under peculiar and difficult circumstances.

THE MINOR COMEDY is the title of another article illustrating the peculiar juvenile tendencies of the advanced age we live in, or a peep behind the curtain into our social drama.

QUEER LUNCH-HOUSES forms the subject of our third Sunday article, and treats of some very singular places in this City where connoisseurs and epicures resort. The surroundings and interiors of these out-of-the-way Lunch-houses, and the kind of people to be met there, are described in happy vein, while considerable information is afforded on the subject.

Among the other features of our Sunday edition will be found

"I Lately Visited an Aunt of mine, residing at Halfway, Onondaga County, N. Y.," writes Mr. Dyer P. Sisson, of White Creek, Washington County, N. Y., "and found her in very poor health, suffering with quite a severe Cough, which had for some years previous, during the Winter months, kept her confined to the room pretty much all the time. Recommending DR. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT, she consented to try it, and the result was altogether satisfactory, as the following extract from a letter, since received from my uncle, abundantly shows:

'Your recent visit, so far as my wife was concerned, seemed providential. For two or three Winters in succession she had been laid up with a stubborn Cough, and last Fall, just before your arrival, it set in again, resisting all attempts to check it. As you know, we were all in some alarm about her, and on your recommendation procured Dr. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. The effect has exceeded our expectations; it has not only relieved her, but brought about a substantial cure, and her health is better today than it was previous to being first attacked.'"

The Road runs from Buffalo to the Detroit River, and is the Eastern link in the new AIR LINE FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO, and has been under construction for about two years past by railroad men who have seen the necessity for a STEEL RAIL, LOW GRADE SHORT ROUTE between the great railroad systems which diverge from Chicago, Toledo and Buffalo.

Among the builders of the road, by whose cash subscriptions 220 miles (out of 290) have already been graded, bridged and made ready for the superstructure, a large part of the steel rails bought, all of the materials for the stations, and a part of the equipment purchased, are: either BUILT or in contemplation between Buffalo and Chicago, and will also shorten the distance between Toledo and Buffalo twenty-three miles.
MILTON COURTRIGHT, JOHN F. TRACY, DAVID DOWS, WM. L. SCOTT, HENRY FARNHAM, R. A. FORSYTH, HENRY H. PORTER, JOHN M. BURKE, M. L. SYKES, JR., B. F. ALLEN, all directors, either in the Chicago and Northwest, or the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; GEO. OPDYKE, of the Midland Road; JOHN B. ALLEN, SIDNEY DILLON, DANIEL DREW, J. S. CASEMENT, J. & J. CASEY, O. S. CHAPMAN, JOHN ROSS, DAVID STEWART, and F. H. WINSTON.
THE ROAD will be

33 MILES SHORTER THAN ANY OTHER ROAD,

THE MAXIMUM GRADE on the entire line does not exceed FIFTEEN FEET to the mile—and Ninety-six per cent of the road IS STRAIGHT.

THE ROAD WILL BE COMPLETED and in running order on or before Dec. 31 of this year.

The principal and interest of the bonds are payable either in New-York, London or Frankfort.
We confidently recommend the bonds to all classes of investors.

At 90 and accrued interest in currency,
THIRTY YEARS TO RUN, AND ISSUED FOR $20,000 PER MILE.
This road forms the shortest and most direct route from the great anthracite and semi-bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania into the central part of this State, and will run in connection with the New-York Central Road, which it crosses at Cayuga Bridge. Traversing, as it does, the finest and most populous agricultural district, generally known as the "GARDEN OF THE STATE," its local traffic will be large, but its greatest source of revenue will be from its coal business. The road is being rapidly built, and will be in active operation during this year. From our knowledge of this enterprise, and after the most thorough investigation, we most confidently recommend the Bonds as a safe investment. We offer, for the present, the Bonds at 90 and accrued interest in currency.

POLITICAL.

THE CINCINNATI CONVENTION.

Chances of the Prominent Candidates for the Presidential Nomination—The Pennsylvania Signers to the Call.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The political sentiment here in regard to the Cincinnati movement is beginning to indicate tangible facts and results as to candidates and platforms. Three interests have now been developed, viz.: First, the Adams party, which has no one pushing it here, but which will show strength at Cincinnati to some degree from Massachusetts, Ohio, and a little from the South. Second, the Judge Davis party, which gets most sympathy from the Democrats, and whose most active supporter here is JOHN D. DEFREES, ex-public printer. This party expects to be supported by Pennsylvania, Indiana, Maryland and Kentucky. Third, the Grosvenor-Gratz Brown-Schurz-Trumbull party, who, backed by the Chicago Tribune, are making a desperate effort to force the nomination of TRUMBULL. GROSVENOR and SCHURZ promise to transfer BROWN's strength to TRUMBULL, if the latter shows more than the former. BROWN expects the support of his followers in Missouri and Kansas, who will compliment him by presenting his name, and then coalesce with TRUMBULL. TRUMBULL will really have no strength of his own outside of Illinois, but the issue will be made that he alone can carry Illinois in the election, and with the Brown combination, it is believed, he can carry enough States to secure the nomination. The Davis movement has lost ground within a few days, and SCHURZ says very confidently that he will not be nominated, which means that he thinks TRUMBULL will. The Democrats insist on DAVIS. SCHURZ and GROSVENOR reply, he is not strong with the Republicans. The Democrats respond that they must have the man most acceptable to their rank and file. SCHURZ says the candidates must be distinctively Republican in order to have strength with the Republicans, and that the Democrats may have the platform. Consequently GROSVENOR has been busy for more than a week past in daily conferences with Democratic members of Congress, discussing and adjusting the various matters of detail concerning the platform and the general direction of the Convention. The Democrats are divided into two parties in regard to this matter: First, a small party who will be satisfied with a concession in the platform, and not in the candidates. Second, the much larger party who insist, with the Chicago Times, that the concession must be in the candidates, and that the platform may be as general and meaningless as the Cincinnati managers choose to make it. The strength of the Liberal Republican Democratic surrender movement with the people is fitly illustrated by the beggarly score and a half of names which have been attached to the call in Pennsylvania. First comes JOHN HICKMAN, of Chester County, in other days a man of note, but who refused to vote for LINCOLN in 1864, voted for GRANT, if at all, with great reluctance in 1868, and has been bitterly against him all through; his present power is well illustrated by the fact that in the late State Senatorial contest in that district (Chester and Delaware,) he and two of his confreres on this call, viz.: Dr. J. B. WOOD and EDMUND DARLINGTON, labored to obtain the nomination of Senator for a friend, one EVERGARD, and only got seventeen delegates out of a hundred; JOS. CAKE, Ex-Collector of Customs at Philadelphia under JOHNSON, turned out by GRANT; his brother, HENRY L. CAKE, Ex-member of Congress from Schuylkill and Lebanon, defeated for renomination by Hon. JOHN W. KELLINGER; E. F. CHASE was a Democrat as long as he could hold office, then joined the Republicans, got an office, and has held one ever since, and is now a Register in Bankruptcy under the appointment of Chief Justice CHASE; ROBERT MORRIS, Philadelphia, formerly clerk in the House of Representatives under EMERSON ETHERIDGE, present politics somewhat mixed; J. C. BOMBERGER, a broker at Harrisburg and a follower of ALECK MCCLURE; J. M. MCCLURE, nephew of ALECK, Assistant Attorney-General under BREWSTER, and turned out; JAY CALDWELL, a Lancaster County man, who for a bargain with Ex-Senator COWAN got his man appointed Postmaster at Lancaster, whose confirmation was defeated by the late THADDEUS STEVENS; SAMUEL EVANS, a Justice of the Peace in Lancaster County, a local politician of small note; M. B. LOWRY, of Erie, a lawyer of some prominence and a disappointed applicant for the mission to the Sandwich Islands; A. K. MCCLURE needs no description; J. R. SYPHER, advertising agent in Philadelphia for New-York Tribune, goes by order of GREELEY; JOSHUA KAMES, of Chester County, notorious Harrisburg lobbyist; THEODORE HERR, a pretended leader of Labor Reformers, owns an interest in a Labor Reform paper in Lancaster, and goes to Cincinnati to make it pay. The rest of the signers are men of such small note that nothing is known of them by any of the prominent Pennsylvanians here. These are the men who are to deliver the great Keystone State to the Democratic-Liberal coalition at Cincinnati, and to place its destinies hereafter in the hands of Democrats.

LIBERALISM AT HOME.

Weakness of the Movement in St. Louis—Schurz Pluffing the French Arms Matter in 1870—The Truth About Jussen—How the Missouri Press Stand.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ST. LOUIS, April 19.—Nothing causes more surprise here than the idea prevalent elsewhere that the "Soreheads" have any strength in Missouri beyond a few personal adherents of BROWN and SCHURZ and some Germans. The Republicans of the State are now thoroughly united, and do not doubt their ability to carry it for the Philadelphia nominee. The duplicity and selfishness of the Liberal leaders are beginning to be understood here and admitted even by their followers. As another proof of SCHURZ's lack of principle in this whole matter, the Missouri Democrat publishes the following:

"More than a year ago Mr. SCHURZ was talking, in Washington, to one of his old friends, Dr. SCHMIDT, formerly a distinguished German editor in Cincinnati, about his quarrel with President GRANT, which seemed to hinge upon the removal of his brother-in-law Mr. JUSSEN. After conversation on general topics SCHURZ pulled out of a drawer a pile of papers relating to the French Arms Sale, and explained their contents. "WELL," said the Doctor, "you don't suppose GRANT had anything to do with that?" "Oh, no," replied SCHURZ. "I don't think he had, but see what a fuss I can make about it, and how easily I can connect GRANT with it." For the truth of this very simple yet very significant statement, we refer to Dr. SCHMIDT himself, who is our informant. His address will be furnished if the facts are questioned.

In connection with the often-repeated denial of SCHURZ that he ever asked the appointment of JUSSEN, his brother-in-law, the Democrat also has his indorsement on the application urging his appointment, which was copied verbatim from his own handwriting, including his signature.

The crowd which is going to Cincinnati from here includes only about a dozen who have been known as steadfast Republicans. The balance are recent or present Democrats. Evidence is accumulating that the whole Cincinnati movement was begun and is yet managed by its authors to advance their personal interests. Here the thing is so well known that not a single Republican paper in Missouri, outside this city, supports it, and only a day or two ago MILO BLAIR, editor of one of these papers, who had been conspicuous for his warfare on SCHURZ, was elected Mayor of Boonville. The only "Liberal" Republican newspaper even here is the Westliche Post, the personal organ of SCHURZ.

E. C.

The German Republican Central Committee.

The German Republican Central Committee met at the Teutonia Assembly Rooms last night and adopted the manifesto in support of Gen. GRANT's Administration and in favor of his renomination for the Presidency, issued a few weeks since by the President of the Central Committee, as published in the TIMES at that time. Dr. GERKE and other dissenters thereupon resigned.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Congressman THOMPSON W. MCNEELY, of Illinois, declines to be a candidate for re-election under any circumstances.

The Boston Globe alludes pleasantly to "the double-hump camel Convention destined to open its batteries at Cincinnati."

The New-Hampshire Republicans will hold their Convention to elect delegates to Philadelphia, in Concord, on Wednesday, May 8.

T. W. NEEDLES is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Auditor in Illinois. He would probably look sharp after the public accounts.

Congressmen JOHN L. BEVERIDGE and CHARLES B. FARWELL are named for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor of Illinois.

The Chicago Times thinks the Democrats must give seven or eight-tenths of the votes which the candidates of the Cincinnati Convention may receive.

The Washington Republican published a specially telegraphed report, containing over 12,000 words, of the great Republican mass-meeting in this City.

CHARLES D. ROBINSON, whom the Democrats of Wisconsin ran for Governor in 1869, says the Cincinnati Convention is not a Democratic concern, to be sure, but it is a sort of purgatory through which the uneasy spirits of Republicans hope to pass to fit themselves for reception with the legions of Democracy.

The Boston Journal well and truly says that if Civil Service reform is ever carried, it will be visibly owing to President GRANT more than to any other man.

The chairman of the Tennessee Democratic State Central Committee has refused to postpone the State Convention, to accommodate the ex-rebel Gen. B. F. CHEATHAM.

The Boston Advertiser says that the Liberal Republican movement has no foot-hold in New-England—that the Republicans who go thence to Cincinnati will go without a constituency.

The Republicans of the Third District of Maine will hold a Convention in Augusta, on Tuesday, May 21, to nominate a candidate for Congress and an elector, and to select delegates to the Philadelphia Convention.

The Ottumna (Iowa) Courier pronounces the letter purporting to have been written by the late Hon. JAMES W. GRIMES to Judge CHAS. MASON, of that State, and condemning the Administration of President GRANT, a forgery.

The Columbus (Ohio) Statesman reluctantly admits that the Liberal Republican meeting in that city was not largely attended, but it says there was a great deal of earnestness manifested in the desire that the Convention should be a success.

Alluding to the high character of the business men who took prominent part in the Grant meeting in this City, the Boston Traveller says: "No President has been more warmly supported by the best men of the country than is President GRANT."

The New-Bedford (Mass.) Mercury, adding its willing testimony, says that if there be a score or two of sore-heads in Massachusetts, the great mass of the Republicans of the State are as hearty supporters of the Administration as ever.

The St. Louis Democrat says that Dr. JAYNE, the brother-in-law of Senator TRUMBULL, is traveling through Illinois, canvassing TRUMBULL's Presidential claims, and promising Federal offices as the reward of desertion from the Republican Party.

The Chicago Times sees that there impends the danger that the Cincinnati movement will be wrecked upon the rock of party prejudice, and it says that Democratic party prejudices cannot die while Republican party prejudices conspire to keep them alive.

Among those named for delegates from Vermont to Philadelphia are Hon. Geo. F. Edmunds, Ex-Gov. John Gregory Smith, Gov. Stewart, Ex-Gov. Holbrook, Ex-Gov. Dillingham, Hon. Horace Fairbanks, Hon. Harman Canfield and Hon. Julius Converse.

The New-Brunswick Fredonian thinks that the prospects of the Republican Party in New-Jersey were never more promising than at this moment, and that all that is needed to make the State permanently Republican is good nominations and a thorough organization.

The Boston Traveller says that of the signers to the Massachusetts address in favor of the Cincinnati meeting, only a few have been among the active and influential men of the party, and of these the majority have been crotchety and most unreliable Republicans.

The preference for the renomination of President GRANT is well-nigh universal in Rhode Island, so far as the people themselves are concerned. So says the Providence Journal, which hints that certain ambitious citizens are, nevertheless, attempting to make a division in the party.

Gov. JEWELL, of Connecticut, has received a letter from Paris, congratulating him upon his election, signed by Gen. SCHENCK, Minister WASHBURNE, CALEB CUSHING, WM. M. EVARTS, and other Americans present at the dinner given in that city on the 4th inst. by Hon. ELLIOTT C. COWDIN, of this City.

Liberal Republicanism has played its part in Missouri, and now the Democratic papers and politicians are actively canvassing the claims of rival simon-pure Democratic candidates for the nomination for Governor. Among those named are Col. JOHN F. PHILLIPS, JAMES S. ROLLINS and ROBERT P. C. WILSON.

A telegram from Peoria, Ill., says that the assertion that Col. R. G. INGERSOLL, Hon. E. G. JOHNSON and other prominent Republicans of Peoria had signed the call to the Cincinnati Convention and would attend, is utterly false. Neither of these gentlemen, nor any other prominent Republicans there, sympathise with the soreheed movement.

The published report of a Liberal Republican meeting in Frederick, Md., had no foundation in truth. A letter from there asserts that there are not five Republicans in Frederick County opposed to the renomination of Gen. GRANT, unless you take such men as Ex-Gov. BRADFORD, who have been voting with the Democrats for the last four years.

The Secretary of the Executive Committee which vainly attempted to hold a Chase Convention in Parkersburg, West Va., says the friends of the Chief-Justice are confident that he will be nominated at Cincinnati. He also asserts that Mr. CHASE's health seems entirely restored, and that his mind is more vigorous now than at any former period of his life.

Gen. SPINNER says that the Democratic Party reminds him of the story of an Irishman who decapitated a turtle, and was astonished to see him squirming about several days after. "Sure an' he must be dead, for how could he live without his head?" remarked a companion. "Av course he's dead," replied the first, "but the poor crathur is not sinsible av it!"

The Hartford Post refers with well-founded pride to the accuracy of its returns of the vote for Governor at the late election in Connecticut, as shown by the official announcement, Gov. JEWELL's plurality being 2,001, exactly as it gave it after revising its figures. The announcement in its first regular edition after the election was that it would be 2,000.

The Lexington (Ky.) Press expresses the opinion that the Liberal Republicans are entirely too fastidious even to deserve success, much less to command it; that their whole policy has been childish in the extreme, and that they have put themselves in an attitude to repel all advances, and have alienated all sympathy and respect which the Democracy held for their movement.

Speaking of the Tribune, the Pottsville (Penn.) Miners' Journal says: "Its correspondence and even its editorial columns have been used to pervert truth and disseminate erroneous information to an extent we have not seen exceeded by the most obscure eight-by-ten sheet in the country, and which every respectable journalist must condemn. * * * The Tribune is by this system rapidly losing its reputation and influence."

Capt. E. B. WARD, of Detroit, is another of the almost innumerable number falsely accused of intending to take part in the Cincinnati meeting. He says he is not yet ready to desert the party that has enhanced the credit of the nation after a most expensive war, and inaugurated a system of care, economy and integrity in the financial management of the Government that has not been equaled since the Administration of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

The Cincinnati Gazette publishes a letter from Mr. C. H. WOLFF, of that city, repelling the persistent assaults that have been made upon Minister CRAMER in his public and private character. The Gazette says that Mr. WOLFF is a merchant of the highest standing in that city, whose name is sufficient to satisfy his acquaintances that he would not write a line to defend any man if he believed him guilty of the least of the many acts that have been charged against Mr. CRAMER.

The St. Louis Democrat says that the attendance was large at the late meeting of the Missouri Republican State Central Committee, and that the proceedings were characterized by the same confidence and enthusiasm which were strikingly exhibited in the Convention at Jefferson City. A plan of action for the campaign was quickly and unanimously decided upon, a universal faith in the Republican Party and its leaders was expressed, and a sweeping triumph in the Gubernatorial contest predicted.

The Hartford Courant of Thursday says: "At the beginning of his term Gen. GRANT had full confidence in Senator FENTON, and accepted his advice without hesitation. But the appointments made at his recommendation were probably the worst, taken as a whole, ever presented by a Senator. The writer hereof has seen a list of 'Fenton appointees' who defaulted, defrauded, broke down, absconded, or were otherwise deposed for evil conduct. It is a formidable list. Some of them are in the Penitentiary. Gen. GRANT lost confidence in Mr. FENTON."

THE MARINE COURT.

The Bar Association—Some New Facts Concerning Judge Curtis' Court.

At the Bar Association investigation of the Marine Court Justices, last evening, CHAS. A. HENRIQUES was examined in the case of DEET against FARMLEY; and H. G. DENNISON, who appeared to act for Judge CURTIS, endeavored to introduce several statements, founded on hearsay evidence, but was not permitted, and Mr. RANDALL tried to introduce a letter from Judge CURTIS impeaching MORRIS GOODHART's statement made on Thursday evening, but the Committee objected.

J. K. HAYWARD stated that he was counsel in an action for ELLEN C. BARRY against the Bowery Savings Bank for the recovery of about $700, which had been placed there in trust by her aunt, since dead; PATRICK COUGHLIN, the aunt's husband, claimed the money as administrator, and was also made party defendant; an order had been made, by consent, that the fund should remain in bank, and it was transferred to the United States Trust Company; the case was tried before Judge CURTIS, and COUGHLIN's defense was that he claimed the money as administrator of the dead aunt; witness offered to put in the papers and record of a case on trial before another Court, in which COUGHLIN had brought an action against ELLEN C. BARRY and the bank, but having failed to serve the bank with papers, had locked up the case so that it could not be tried; CURTIS said he "did not want the papers, papers always confused him, he could not be cognizant of a case in any other Court, he did not care for papers, and he would, in his own way, decide the matter in a few days"; shortly after witness heard that the money had been removed for the Trust Company, and found that CURTIS, without serving notice, had given an order to pay the money over to COUGHLIN, or his counsel, MALCOLM CAMPBELL; the sum paid over was $616; upon finding these facts, witness went to the Court to see the papers, and ascertained that they were missing; upon ascertaining this witness went in search of Judge CURTIS, and learned he had gone to Europe; witness then moved to restore the record, with copies of the papers, and moved also to render the order void, as the Court had no jurisdiction in the case of an administrator; the case was tried before Judge JOACHIMSEN, and an order given vacating the order; an action was begun against the Trust Company, and also against counsel, MALCOLM CAMPBELL; this action was tried before Judge TRACEY, who ruled out all the evidence and dismissed the case; an appeal has been taken, which has not yet been argued.

Judge NOAH DAVIS then read the following letter:

MARINE COURT, CITY OF NEW-YORK,
NEW-YORK, April 17, 1872.

DEAR SIR: The "Gordian Knot" can be cut, so far as this Court is concerned, by the Legislature of the Commonwealth. I have endeavored during this session to secure some reform. I requested the members at Albany to abolish the reference system; to take away from the Judges of this Court the power to sit in summary proceedings; to allow parties aggrieved the right to appeal to the General Term of the Common Pleas, from the orders as well as judgments of the Justices of this Court; and also to enact that the decisions of the General Term of this Court, reversing a finding of a Judge below, should not be final, but appealable to the Common Pleas. Hence the fight between my associates and myself. My remedy is this: Abolish the Marine Court. The Legislature is now in session. There is ample time to do it. I have no corrupt interests, as my associates have, to protect, by the continued life of a tribunal that no longer, as at present constituted, fulfills a healthy mission. By associates, I refer to those three who made such a melancholy spectacle of themselves the other night. With the single exception of the Stokes case, I have never known accused parties querying the places of witnesses and jury. Yours truly,
GEORGE M. CURTIS.

Judge NOAH DAVIS.

The Committee then adjourned until this evening.
